WPB Asks Boost In Cargo Planes

Plan May Cut Combat Output, Nelson Warns

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—(P)—The War Production Board's committee on cargo planes has recommended the doubling, at least, of cargo plane production, Chairman Donald M. Nelson announced today, but he left squarely up to the military chiefs of staff the decision whether to cut down combat plane production to make the increase possible.

Three Recommendations

Three major recommendations of the committee, Nelson said, called for:

1. An increase in cargo plane output to at least twice the present program, through an increase in present procurement and through conversion of certain bombers to cargo type.
2. Further impetus to development of longer range land and sea planes.
3. A "large increase" in facilities for the manufacture and transportation of aviation gasoline to meet the needs of a greatly expanded movement of cargo by air.

Likes Mars Plane

"That is a decision for the chiefs of staff to make, since it is essentially a matter of high military strategy."

"Meanwhile, the War Production Board will continue to study the situation to see whether it is going to be possible to expand our production of cargo planes through new facilities or by using other industries such as shipbuilders."

In the latter connection, Nelson said the committee's study indicated the giant Martin Mars 70-ton seaplane would be "very successful." This is the type which Henry J. Kaiser, west Coast shipbuilding wizard, has proposed to build in shipyards.

Fifty per cent of all military tonnage could be shipped overseas by air, in the committee's opinion, if sufficient sky freighters were available. Twenty per cent of all non-military commodities which must be exported from the United States in the next year, including machine tools, concentrated foods, chemicals, surgical and medical supplies, could be shipped by air if the planes were on hand, it was asserted.

Supplies for Bomber

However, even if the cargo aircraft program were doubled, as recommended, sufficient planes would be available to deliver only a fraction of this material.

Senator Lee, Democrat, Oklahoma, chairman of a senate subcommittee investigating the possibility of building more cargo planes, said today some American bombers were grounded in Africa.

Law and Order Now, Freedom After War, Cripps Warns India

LONDON, Thursday, Aug. 6.—(P)—Sir Stafford Cripps, whose mission to settle the Indian problem failed last spring, declared in a statement today that Britain intended to "preserve law and order" in India until the war ended.

Trolley Travel Is Up 35,000 A Day Here

Urging immediate completion of the staggered hour program, H. Carl Wolf, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, said yesterday passenger traffic on trolleys and buses had increased 35,000 a day since permanent gasoline rationing began.

"This rush upon Georgia Power Company facilities would have brought a transportation crisis upon us before now if we hadn't started the staggered hour plan when we did," Wolf said. "We still have a lot to do to avoid a crisis."

"On last Monday," he went on, "the company's trolleys and buses hauled 360,000 passengers. This was an increase of 19,000 over the previous Monday, and a gain of 36,000 over Monday, July 20—two days before permanent rationing began."

"Total passengers are running 50 per cent more than at the same time last year," Wolf added. "The partial staggered plan now in effect has made it possible for existing transit facilities to meet this great demand, but the growing number of riders has caused buses and trolleys to be packed during rush hours," he said.

"We have made good progress here, but there are still some 8,000 workers needed in the plan as it was originally drawn up. We are trying to avoid a situation in which there won't even be enough standing room for all the workers who must get to and from their jobs."

It is "imperative" that business and industrial firms which have not enlisted in the program readjust their hours, Wolf added. Junior and senior high schools also must change their hours when they reopen this fall, he said.

BAHR TRIAL DELAYED

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 5.—(P)—The trial of Herbert Karl Friedrich Bahr, alleged German spy who was arrested aboard the diplomatic exchange liner Drottningholm at Jersey City last month, on a charge of conspiracy to commit espionage was postponed today until August 17 by Federal Judge F. Smith.

After the war, he said, the Indian people will be given an opportunity to attain the self-government which Indian Nationalist leaders are demanding be granted them now and for which they are preparing to launch a civil disobedience campaign.

Sir Stafford made his statement to the press as the working committee of the All-India Congress party adopted a resolution demanding independence for India. The resolution will be put before the full committee of the party at a meeting in Bombay Friday.

"We make no threats," Cripps wrote, "but we must assert unequivocally our duty to India, to great minorities and to the United Nations to preserve law and order until hostilities cease and we can then give as we have promised the fullest opportunity for attainment of self-government by the Indian people."

"I am not yet too late for the Indian people to decide upon rapid and ordered progress."

"I can assure them that the British people are as determined upon self-government for India as they are themselves. We ask the great masses of India to be patient for a short time longer while the cause of freedom is being fought out, not because we want to delay but because the hard facts of war make a complete change impossible at the moment."

All-India Party Near Showdown With Britain

BOMBAY, India, Aug. 5.—(P)—A proposal that India, if granted freedom by the British, would line up beside the United Nations against "the Japanese or any other aggressor" was put before the All-India Congress Party working committee today as a showdown between the British Empire and the dominant Indian party appeared near.

The working committee also drew up a resolution to be presented to the full committee meeting here Friday recommending that if Britain rejects a demand for Indian independence full powers to lead a civil disobedience movement be given Gandhi.

The draft of the resolution dealing with India's role against aggressor nations in the event of independence said the government "will wholeheartedly and unreservedly declare itself on the side of the United Nations, agreeing to meet the Japanese or any other aggressor with armed resistance."

It was said the new resolution was drafted to comply with "reasonable and constructive" criticisms made after the British disclosed the original draft of a resolution offered by Gandhi. In the original draft the Indian leader threatened civil disobedience action against the British if demands for independence were refused and stated the first move of an independent government probably would be to negotiate with Japan.

Gandhi has said that if independence came immediately he would ask to be sent to Japan to plead with her to free China or else "count on the stubborn resistance" of millions of Indians.

Martin Changes His Testimony In Aroff Trial

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 5.—(P)—Chief Specialist Tony Martin, testifying as the first defense witness in the Navy court-martial of Lieutenant Commander Maurice N. Aroff, disclosed today that Aroff had visited him at his home last night.

Several hours later, Martin said, he suddenly remembered a conversation in which Aroff, former assistant naval procurement officer here, had offered to pay for a car given him by the singer.

Martin's testimony repudiated his statement as a prosecution witness last week that Aroff never had offered him a cent for the automobile. The Navy charges that Aroff accepted the $950 sedan to facilitate the screen star's enlistment.

It all came back to him, the witness said, as he was lying in bed early this morning at his mother's Oakland home.

"I knew there was something I had to say," he testified. So he went into his mother's room and called to her, "Mom, wake up. I told her I recalled that conversation as it was this morning."

It was on January 3, Martin said. He and Aroff were discussing cars. Martin said he offered the commander $200, the amount the latter calculated he had spent on telephone calls in connection with the singer's efforts to obtain a commission.

Aroff refused the money, Martin said, but told him instead that when he sold the car, "I'll deduct $200 and give you the rest."

The witness did not say immediately what he and Aroff talked about last night. Three weeks ago, however, Martin said, the officer met him on Treasure Island and said:

"Tony, I want to ask you something. I don't want to put any words in your mouth. I just want to see if you recall this conversation."

Truman Charges Bureau of Ships Guilty of 'Negligence'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—(P)—A charge that the Navy's Bureau of Ships was guilty of "negligence or willful misconduct" in connection with plans to build special tank-carrying vessels has been placed before Secretary of the Navy Knox by Senator Truman, Democrat, Missouri, chairman of the Senate Defense Investigating Committee.

A letter from Truman to Knox, which contained the charge, also asserted that the bureau had treated Higgins Industries, Inc., of New Orleans, in a "biased and prejudiced" way in connection with the construction plans.

Truman explained to reporters that the Higgins firm was granted a contract for turning out tanker lighters, to be used for transporting tanks from ships to shore where no wharves were available.

However, Truman said, production was held up for seven or eight months while the Navy checked on other types of tank lighters for possible use instead of those produced by Higgins.

Navy Orders
"Finally, after our committee began investigating the matter," continued Truman, "the Navy ordered Higgins to go ahead with the production of the tank lighters as originally planned."

Truman said his complaint to Knox had nothing to do with the cancellation of the Higgins' contract to build Liberty cargo ships by mass production methods. This contract, a separate one, was cancelled by the Maritime Commission on the ground that insufficient steel was available, and a hot controversy has resulted.

Truman informed Knox that the senate committee had taken testimony on action of officers of the Bureau of Ships and would not make it public if Knox believed the committee should not do so.

Truman said the testimony had been taken in executive sessions recently.

"But, I cannot condemn too strongly the negligence or willful misconduct on the part of the officers of the Bureau of Ships entrusted with this vital matter," Truman wrote, "involving as it did both the success of our military forces and the lives of American marines, sailors and soldiers."

Scores Bureau.
"The biased and prejudiced treatment received by Higgins Industries, Inc., from the Bureau of Ships is of secondary interest only, but a company possessing the skill and energy in both design and construction now admitted by the Bureau of Ships ought not to have received the treatment accorded to it in this matter. During the prosecution of a war where the very existence of the nation is at stake, the Bureau of Ships should have accepted with gratitude the proved accomplishments of a private concern, instead of insisting as it did upon using models of its own design despite the repeated failures thereof."

The chairman said the fact the war effort had not suffered an irreparable injury "is due largely to the ability and energy of Higgins Industries, Inc., and to its repeated criticisms of the shortcomings of the designs prepared by the Bureau of Ships."

Pelley Guilty On 11 Counts, U. S. Jury Says

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 5.—(P)—William Dudley Pelley, former leader of the Silver Shirts of America, was convicted by a federal court jury tonight on 11 counts of criminal sedition and conspiracy.

Pelley's two associates, Lawrence A. Brown and Miss Marian Agnes Henderson, who were tried with him, were convicted only on count 12 of the indictment, which charged conspiracy.

Judge Robert C. Baltzell immediately set August 12 at 10 a. m. for pronouncement of sentence. Each count carries a maximum penalty of 20 years' imprisonment and a maximum fine of $10,000.

New Trial Sought.
Floyd G. Christian, one of Pelley's attorneys, said that a motion for a new trial would be filed. If it is denied, he said, the case would be carried to the United States circuit court of appeals at Chicago.

Only a handful of spectators were in the courtroom when the jury brought in the verdict at 9:07 p. m. (C. W. T.). The jury deliberated until about 7 and then adjourned for dinner and then resumed again shortly after 8 o'clock.

The three originally were indicted on 12 counts, but during the trial the government agreed to drop count 6 at the request of the Navy Department since it might disclose military secrets.

Pelley was pictured as both "traitor" and "patriot" in opposing arguments before a federal court jury retired late today to

Cossacks Slay 3,000 Nazis in Night Attack

By EDDY GILMORE.

MOSCOW, Thursday, Aug. 6.—(P)—A new German push south and west of Stalingrad by Nazi tank and infantry columns seeking to complete a pincer movement in the great steel city has brought fighting on the central front to Kotelnikowski, 95 miles from Stalingrad, the Soviet high command announced today.

"Stubborn battles" were fought Wednesday at the town on the Stalingrad-North Caucasus railway and the Germans advanced slightly with heavy losses, the midnight communique said.

The Russians reported continued fighting in other sectors of the Stalingrad front and in the North Caucasus but without specific results.

South of Kuschchevka, 50 miles south of Rostov, the Germans suffered particularly heavy losses, the Russian said. One Soviet unit alone accounted for six tanks and killed 600 Germans.

In the Kletskaia sector, on the northern end of the German pincer before Stalingrad, repeated German attacks were repulsed and 1,200 Nazi troops were killed, the communique said.

In the area south of Belaya Glina, 100 miles southeast of Rostov where the Russians are fighting a delaying action against German tanks and motorized infantry, a new Soviet withdrawal was announced.

Artillery Active.
Lively artillery exchanges were reported on the northwestern front in the vicinity of Leningrad.

The Russians retreated again in the Belaya Glina sector deep in the Caucasus to escape envelopment by German parachute troops and furious assaults by tank masses and swarms of dive-bombers.

As Russia's peril increased, Major General Follett Bradley, of the United States Air Force, landed a bomber in Moscow and declared:

"I am here to facilitate any possible way to make aid to Russia more effective. We are sending all we can and would like to send more. This is the focal point of the war. There is great needness in America to contribute everything possible here."

Nazis Repulsed.
The lines in the Don elbow 75 miles west of Stalingrad stiffened and held after a withdrawal, but a retreat in the Timanysk sector 130 miles southwest of the great industrial city on the Volga increased the peril before that southern finger of the German pincer. At Tsimlyansk, the Germans have crossed the lower Don.

Warm Weather Pushes Hot Wave From Forecast

The usual "continued hot" was missing from Weathermen Glen Jefferson's forecast for today. Instead, he said "continued" rather warm, with scattered afternoon thundershowers.

Atlantans were hoping that today's maximum temperature would go no higher than the 85 degrees reached yesterday. That probably will be the case, the forecast indicated, if the showers hold out.

Linder, Talmadge Split Is Still Unhealed

The split between Tom Linder and Governor Talmadge is as wide open and as incurable as it has been since the day Talmadge stabbed his old campaign leader in the back, the commissioner of agriculture declared yesterday.

Tom Linder still tells the farmers of the state it is all right with him if they scratch Governor Talmadge's name on September 9.

Special envoys of the Talmadge Palace Guard are roaming Georgia highways between the Tennessee and Florida state lines, arguing earnestly with the farmers that "there is no disagreement between the Governor and Tom Linder."

Linder admitted yesterday that he had heard "of this campaign to mislead my friends with the wrong picture of the relations between Governor Talmadge and me."

A press conference, Linder smiled as newspapermen asked him about the Talmadge undercover plot, reported from many sections of the state.

Linder reached into a desk drawer and brought out a clipping from The Constitution of July 10. "All I want to say today," he said, "is that the relations between the Governor and me are exactly as they were on and before July 4 and on the date this story was printed."

The story was headlined: "LINDER PROTESTS RUMOR OF PLOT WITH GOVERNOR."

The first paragraph of the story read:

"A whispering campaign started through Georgia by the Talmadge Palace Guard was charged yesterday by Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder as a typical effort to delude the voter into believing there is no disagreement between Governor Talmadge and me."

The story said further: "They're saying," said Tom Linder, "that the Governor and I really are the best of friends; that all this business was cooked up between us."

At the time that story was printed, just a couple of weeks after Talmadge's executive committee ruled Linder out of Talmadge's

Another Talmadge Leader Joins Arnall

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
LEARY, Ga., Aug. 5.—J. L. Horne, well-known farmer of Calhoun county and county commissioner, and a long-time supporter of Governor Talmadge, has announced his support of Ellis Arnall for governor.

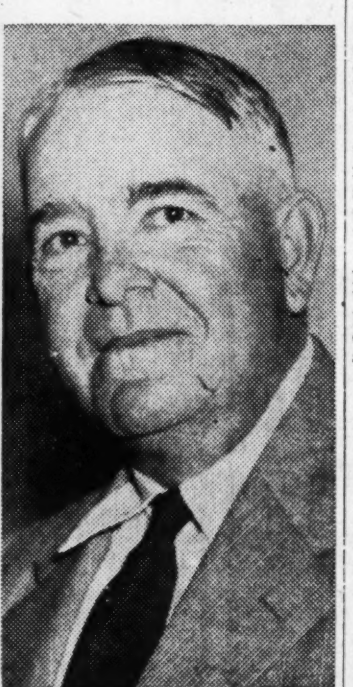

Horne always has supported Governor Talmadge in previous campaigns. He supported him for the senate and for governor in 1940.

In both of those campaigns he gave either a fish fry or a barbecue and gathered crowds to hear the Governor which were among the largest of the campaign.

In leaving the Governor, this Calhoun farmer and county leader said that the Governor's wrecking of the Georgia school system was one of the principal reasons.

A second reason was that he believed that the Governor's action against Tom Linder, commissioner of agriculture, demonstrated that the Governor would double-cross any of his real farm friends if he thought he could get a vote.

Calhoun county and others in the same section are believed safely in the Arnall column as other farmers almost daily are leaving the Talmadge camp.

Pacific Coast To Be Darkened By Drastic Dim-out Regulations

Area Placed Virtually in A Blackout

New Order Will Become Effective on August 20.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 5.—(AP)—The Army today ordered a dim-out of the entire Pacific coast, so vast and drastic in scope as to approach the proportions of a blackout.

It called a halt to baseball and other outdoor sports at night, ordered every electric sign and theater marquee extinguished and prescribed some form of shielding for virtually every other type of exterior lighting.

The regulations, defined in a proclamation by Lieutenant General J. L. DeWitt, commanding the Fourth Army and Western Defense Command, will become effective August 20.

150 Miles Wide.

Covering a strip of western Washington, Oregon and California at some points as much as 150 miles wide, they have the effect of extending and tremendously augmenting the dimout order requested by the Navy last spring for certain oceanfront sections.

The proclamation created a zone of restricted lighting, which General DeWitt said the present situation requires as a matter of military necessity. He called attention to attacks on ships traveling in coastal waters and attacks on land installations.

All ornamental lighting of every description was ordered extinguished. This included ball games, billboards, floodlighting and unobstructed display windows. All parks of the Pacific Coast Baseball League are within the area affected by the order.

Shields Lights.

Remaining lights, including traffic signals and street lights, must be shielded so as not to be visible from above.

Lights visible from the sea must be shielded on the ocean side, including draping of residential windows.

Exception is made for navigation lights for air and water travel and railroad signals.

Cognizance was taken of industrial plant problems but the order called for as great shielding as possible to reduce vertical illumination to a minimum.

Automobiles are required to reduce their lights to about half the dim or city driving light strength.

Capital Hails Visit of Queen Of Netherlands

Her Highness Will Address Joint Congress at Noon.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—(INS)—Doughty Wilhelmina, queen of the Netherlands empire, was tonight warmly welcomed to the capital of the embattled United Nations by President Roosevelt as "the mother of her people."

In low-voiced, deeply touched response to the President's toast the queen waived in the direction of the portraits looking down from the walls at the state dinner in her honor and spoke of the "stirring history" of America and her gratitude to this nation.

"These hard times will pass," the plump, motherly monarch said, "and when at last victory will be ours, my compatriots like myself will know that this will be largely thanks to American spiritual and material forces alongside those of the other United Nations."

F. D. R. Compliment.

President Roosevelt, gazing steadily at the indomitable queen who has seen her empire unmercifully plundered, but leads her people on to further battle said, "The people of this great democracy everywhere hold the head of the Netherlands nation in respect not only for her great leadership and high achievement, but they have in addition a deep and affectionate regard for her personality as the mother of her people."

Tomorrow the queen will address a joint session of Congress at noon and later meet the President for lunch and a long conference on the Dutch role in this war and her position in post-war reconstruction of the world.

Arriving here at 4:30 p. m. from Princess Juliana's summer home in Lee, Mass., the ruler of the Netherlands was met at the station by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

After the cameramen were shoofed away, the President led the way to the east ballroom, where the queen received cabinet members, United States generals, and ranking government officials. With the queen were her private secretary, lady-in-waiting, aide-de-camp and special aide, young Lieutenant Christopher Krediet, who escaped from the conquered lowlands to fight against the Nazi invaders.

Friday morning the queen will follow Prime Minister Churchill's lead by attending the President's press conference. At that time the monarch, like Churchill, will address the correspondents, have her picture taken with the President, and possibly answer questions submitted before and after.

Small Entourage.

At the insistence of the Queen her three-day stay here will include no state dinners other than that being given tonight at the White House.

Accompanying the Dutch monarch is an extraordinarily small entourage including only her private secretary, Jonker George Van Pels Van Gaurian; her aide, Major General L. H. Van Oyen; and the lady-in-waiting, Baroness Van Boetelaer. The request of the Queen, who arrived here from Princess Juliana's summer home in Lee, Mass., that several simplicity set the pace for her visit, will be regretfully followed by the State Department.

Many of those who have long awaited the Queen's arrival will be extremely disappointed in their high hopes to drop a curtsy or bow before her.

Superb businesswoman and ruler that she is, the Queen has completely vetoed all pomp and circumstance. She will leave Washington some time later in the week and begin the long trip back to her exiled government in London.

Wage, Dividend Payments Hit Record Total

Commerce Department Sets Half-Year Figure at $52,071,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5. (AP)—Wage, salary, dividend, business profit and other income payments to individuals were estimated by the Commerce Department today to have reached a record-breaking total of $52,071,000,000 in the first half of 1942.

While the department gave no estimates for the full year, income payments customarily run somewhat higher in the second half of a calendar year, indicating 1942 probably will set a new record in excess of $104,000,000,000.

The half-year total included a monthly record of $9,537,000,000 for June, which was attributed by the department to "a sharp rise in the steadily mounting total of federal pay rolls."

Part of the pay roll increase, in turn, was credited to the pay raise given men in the armed forces. "Factory pay rolls," the department said, "continued to expand as the production of war goods more than offset the drop in civilian goods output."

Summarizing the first six months of 1942, the department noted that salaries and wages increased faster than any other types of income. Now they appear to comprise 69 per cent of total payments instead of the customary 65 per cent.

One of the features was a trombone solo by John Coffey, of New Bedford, who played variations of "O, Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean."

War Tide Turning, Exiled Dutch Leader Assures Holland

By DREW MIDDLETON.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—(AP)—Premier Pieter S. Gerbrandy, of the Dutch government-in-exile, told his people in the German-occupied Netherlands tonight that the war tide is starting to turn and urged them to "await with wise patience the moment when the call comes from here, not only to take a passive but also an active part" in possible second front operations against the Nazis.

The strategic picture of the war has improved, he declared in a radio appeal as Allied chiefs were reported reviewing alternatives to a mass invasion of the continent.

The Dutch premier cited these reasons for saying that the tide of war is beginning to turn in favor of the United Nations:

1. Air superiority, with heavy bombardments upon war centers which are but a prelude to what will follow.

2. Although the attacking powers of Germany and Japan are far from exhausted, their limits are becoming clear.

3. The military rise of the United States.

"Everywhere people are convinced that it is better to die for a free Europe than to live under the German yoke," he said.

British and United States service chiefs, meanwhile, sought a swifter means of relieving the desperate Russian war situation than by RAF bombing offensives.

Invasion of the continent obviously would be difficult because of a lack of shipping.

Every alternative undoubtedly is being discussed, however. These, it was said, possibly include a limited diversion at some point where the German advantage of interior lines of communication would be slight, and an attempt to seize a bridgehead somewhere on the continental coast and hold it for subsequent exploitation by British and American armies.

The enemy continued to advertise the strength of his fortifications along the European coast-line.

Stockholm Reports.

Reports from Stockholm stressed the German army's satisfaction with new defenses and described hundreds of heavy guns, concrete emplacements and a system of blockhouses and pillboxes behind the front line.

(The German radio broadcast a DNB dispatch telling of a visit by a group of foreign press correspondents to the fortifications on the invitation of the German high command.)

The dispatch reiterated the story of deeply echeloned, bomb-proof concrete walls which are efficiently protected by numerous anti-aircraft, naval and army artillery gun emplacements, innumerable batteries of long-range cannon in high shelters and numerous bases for planes.)

The invasion front line now is within range of the tiny guns of British light naval craft which, daring minefields and the Nazi air force, have recaptured the channel in the last four or five months.

There will be increasingly important as plans for invasion mature, it was pointed out. Should the Allies decide to seek a bridgehead in preparation for a major thrust, British naval control of the channel would be vital if supplies are to be maintained.

Allied Planes Bomb Axis Ships Near Cairo

CAIRO, Aug. 5. (AP)—Heavy Allied bombers attacked three large enemy merchant ships in the eastern Mediterranean yesterday, hitting at least one squarely and scoring near misses on the others, a British communique reported today.

Other bombers, ranging westward as far as Bardia in air activity of growing pitch, scored direct hits on Axis lighters and pounded "enemy light shipping" with sea and air escort, the communique said.

TEHRAN, Iran, Aug. 5.—(AP)—Iran's new Premier Ahmad Gavam Suanah said today he intended to create a ministry of supply and wanted United States experts to organize it for him.

FIRE SURVIVORS—More than 100 chickens suffocated in the smoke from the fire at 85 Broad street, but two sturdy hens came through it all, alive and cackling. Paul Davis, manager of the Warren Produce Company, 83 Broad, is holding the sole remaining cacklers.

BURNING BUILDING—Flames swept through the Hussey Distributing Company building at 85 Broad street yesterday morning and narrowly missed burning three people to death. Firemen are seen as they brought the fire under control after a short, sharp battle. Loss was estimated in the thousands of dollars.

Fast-Spreading Downtown Fire Nearly Traps 3

100 Hens Suffocated by Smoke in Produce Store.

Quick-spreading flames wrecked a one-story building at 85 Broad street yesterday morning, nearly trapping a woman and two men, and caused such a heavy pall of thick, acrid smoke over clouds downtown Atlanta that thousands of office workers hurriedly sniffled their windows.

More than a hundred hens and fryers in a next-door produce store suffocated and only two sturdy hens survived the blanket of smothering smoke through which firemen cut to put out the dangerous blaze in almost record time.

The fire started shortly after 10 o'clock in the store of the Hussey Distributing Company at 85 Broad street, and virtually demolished it. The watch repairing shop of D. A. Tobias, in the same building, was burned, and the Warren Produce store next door at 83 Broad was damaged by fire, water and smoke. Smoke also damaged the stock of the Haas Furniture Company at 87 Broad.

Man Burned Severely.

Ivan Hussey, 40, owner of the Hussey company, was severely burned about the head and shoulders when he successfully attempted to save the store's cash, and his assistant, Mrs. W. B. James, was singed. Her hair and eyelashes and eyebrows were burned. Tobias' hair was singed, too. Hussey was treated at a hospital for his burns.

"I was sitting in the office when all of a sudden the whole store was blazing," Mrs. James said. "I jumped up and ran for the door and I didn't stop to get my purse either."

Money in Safe Saved.

"Hussey went back in for the money in the safe and got it. Part of the money was in flames when he got there but he saved it all," she said. The money "amounted to considerable."

Firemen, led by Chief C. C. Styron and Assistant Chief W. B. Fanning, battled the fire for some 30 minutes before it was completely under control. Police and spectators praised them for their work because the flames leaped through the wooden inside of the brick-face store with devastating rapidity. The fire was believed to have started through defective wiring.

The chickens caged in the Warren Produce Company were knocked over like tenpins as the hot, choking smoke poured into the room.

Red-eyed firemen, tears streaming down their blackened cheeks, had no time to save the pennied fryers. They were too busy saving that block of stores.

Crowd Jams Scene.

"How those two Rhode Island Red hens came through all that smoke and water alive I'll never know," said Paul Davis, manager of the produce store.

Davis added his loss ran into thousands of dollars and that it wasn't covered by insurance. The Hussey Distributing Company was insured, it was said.

Traffic-blocking crowds jammed about the scene of the fire, near Broad and Hunter streets, and police were kept busy clearing the way for firemen.

Office workers from far uptown reported the smoke wafted in the windows many stories above the streets and in some cases caused discomfort. Long hanging clouds held the smoke down, while breezes spread it over the city.

U. S. 'Just Beginning,' Turkish Paper Says

ISTANBUL, Aug. 4.—(Delayed.)—Editor Zekeriya Settel wrote today in the newspaper Tan that "Europe has almost come to the end of her war effort when America is just beginning."

He said that the whole United States was determined "to strike the enemy a mortal blow," and added:

"While we wait, the general mobilization of American industry and immense preparations for a huge army inspire faith."

Britain's Ordnance Plants Swell Output

LONDON, Aug. 5.—(AP)—Britain's 42 government-owned ordnance factories are producing four and a half times as many guns as a year ago and twice as many as they were originally intended to turn out, Sir Andrew Duncan, supply minister, told the house of commons today.

He said that although 60 per cent of the 300,000 workers now engaged at the plants were women, the output per worker had increased 40 per cent in the past year.

Cuban Cabinet Quits; Coalition Group Sought

HAVANA, Aug. 5.—(AP)—Premier Carlos Saladrigas announced last night the resignation of his cabinet to enable organization by President Fulgencio Batista of a "war cabinet" to include representatives of opposition political parties.

Negotiations have been carried on for some days between the government and opposition parties to draft a program which would enable the president to form a coalition government.

2 Plans Studied 50 Possemen To Keep Tires Hunt Slayer On U. S. Wheels

Decision Is Expected in Two Weeks by Chairman Nelson.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—(AP)—The problem of keeping tires on the nation's wheels resolved itself today into a choice between nationwide gasoline rationing, long supported by the Office of Price Administration, and a system of "mileage rationing" and speedometer checkups, advocated by the Office of Defense Transportation.

A War Production Board spokesman, who declined to permit use of his name, said these were the only two plans before the board, which debated the question for four hours yesterday and whose chairman, Donald M. Nelson, forecast a decision in two weeks.

Although ODT kept mum about details of its plan for rationing mileage, there were apparently reliable reports that the scheme called for "gasless Sundays" or some other form of restriction on hours of selling gasoline to discourage pleasure driving.

Other essentials of the plan—as divulged by sources outside ODT but not denied by that agency—included the issuance of "certificates of necessity" to all drivers outside the present ration area.

These would specify, in addition to a basic minimum mileage allowance, additional mileage reckoned on actual vocational needs.

Speakers at the meeting said the check on actual miles of travel, but whether the government would undertake such checkups or rely on affidavits from motorists was not disclosed.

OPA officials, bearing in mind the widespread violations which occurred under the east coast's "honor system" of gasoline rationing, held that the ODT plan could not possibly be as effective as country-wide rationing of motor fuel, for the simple reason that it appeared to rely heavily on voluntary compliance.

An ODT spokesman countered: "We think it is enforceable." But he said he could not comment further.

The plan was developed, WPB officials said, as a substitute for nationwide gasoline rationing, which in June was so close to adoption that OPA had quietly scattered 300 field agents through the country to set up the machinery. These were called in when President Roosevelt indicated disapproval of the drastic measure at that time, and ODT experts were set to work developing an alternative scheme.

Laval To Hand Over 10,000 Jews to Nazis

LONDON, Aug. 5.—(AP)—Fighting French headquarters tonight reported receipt of word through underground channels that Pierre Laval, chief of government of the Vichy regime, has agreed to surrender to Germany all Jews of "so-called foreign origin" in occupied France and 10,000 Jews from the unoccupied area.

These figures added 9,600 Jews already in the concentration camps at Gers, Rivesaltes and Verret have been designated for deportation and 1,000 others would leave Pau, Perpignan and Marseille for an unrevealed destination beginning tomorrow.

Mass arrests also were made in Lyons on Sunday.

Charles Elrod War Veteran At Age of 17

Atlantan Dodged Bombs in Russia, Escaped Sub Attacks.

By FRANK DRAKE.

For 17 years, Charles Brittain Elrod, of 1193 Hardee street, N. E., lived a quiet, sheltered life just as any growing schoolboy would. But lately, he has had more blood-chilling adventures and seen more action than most folks in their entire three-score and ten.

Charles Elrod is now 17 and 1½. He gave himself and his country a birthday present last January 15 by signing up with the Navy and since that recent date he has traveled many times to Iceland, to Nova Scotia, and has just returned from embattled Russia, where he saw fields near Murmansk covered with 10,000 dead Russian and German soldiers.

Dodged Bombs.

He has strolled casually along Russian city streets while German planes high overhead dropped tons of TNT and dive-bombers played merciless streams of death upon the towns.

He has gone through three submarine attacks and come through with only a minor shrapnel wound in his right hand.

Seventeen-and-one-half-year-old Charles takes it all very calmly. Someone else might get excited but not him. Just back from a trip to Russia, during which his boat was attacked by submarines, one of his first acts was to buy a $50 war bond with his pay check, and then he went to see his girl friend.

Enlisted Here.

Charles enlisted here and immediately went to a gunnery school in Virginia and was assigned to the Armed Guard Detail—crews manning guns on merchant ships. And he likes it.

The last time his ship was attacked by a submarine, he was playing his phonograph—listening to the music he used to "jitterbug" to back home in Atlanta. He didn't listen long.

At the first warning, he and his mates leaped to their stations and began firing the large guns. Round after round they poured out—and they scored direct hits, Charles said.

"That submarine's bow shot right up in the air," he declared. "Of his thrill in hitting the Axis raider, he said:

"You doggone tootin' I was thrilled. I just jumped up and down and hollered!"

Charles spent some time in Russia, waiting till the convoy was ready to come back, and he had time to observe the girls over there.

All in Army.

"They are all in the army, just about," he said. "Those who aren't in the army work 12 hours or longer every day. They aren't in the mood for romance."

Charles's brother, William F. Elrod, is in the armed guard detail of the navy also. He is 19 and is "set set" now. They are the sons of W. T. Elrod, who is a veteran of World War I.

The young sailor came by The Constitution office yesterday with his $50 bond held tightly in his hand. He remarked the service he is rendering on the Navy isn't enough—he knows bonds have to be bought, too.

Vichy French Consul

Condemned in Turkey

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Aug. 5. (AP) A Vichy French vice consul in the southern district of Turkey has been condemned to death for espionage against Turkey, it was disclosed today.

The case now is before an appellate court after being tried by a special tribunal.

The vice consul, whose name was not disclosed, was stationed in Antakia (Antioch), in the Hatay district, which borders on Syria and lies close to Cyprus.

Increase Asked in Production of Cargo Planes

and Australia for lack of spare parts.

This, he said, showed the need for big cargo planes to speed materials to the fighting fronts, actual and potential.

Lieutenant General Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army's air forces, told the subcommittee the Army was doing everything to obtain sufficient cargo planes in a rounded, all-out program which called for three cargo-carriers to every 10 long-range bombers by the end of 1943.

"Short of Need."

Only the available supply of tools, facilities and critical materials is limiting the production of transport planes, the air chief told the Military Affairs Subcommittee.

"We believe it is possible to get more tools, facilities and materials, but they are not in sight at present," he said.

Commenting on Arnold's report that air freighter construction for the last half of 1942 would be equivalent to 21 per cent of the multiple-engine bomber plane construction, Chairman Lee, Democrat, Oklahoma, said this was "very encouraging" but still short of the need. Arnold said the cargo plane program for the second half of 1943 would increase to 32 per cent of the multiple-engine bomber output.

Lee told reporters he was convinced that Henry J. Kaiser, west coast shipbuilder, should be "given the green light" to build the 70-ton Mars flying boat on assembly lines in his shipyards.

Cargo Submarines.

He said he also believed Andrew Jackson Higgins, Louisiana shipbuilder, should be allowed to complete his new yard and construct the 7,500-ton cargo-carrying submarines designed by the veteran inventor, Simon Lake.

Work on Higgins' yard was halted by the Maritime Commission's cancellation of a contract for 200 Liberty ships.

Lee said Rear Admiral John H.

Towers, chief of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics, told the committee in executive session the Navy also was receiving cargo planes.

Lee recognized that the shortage of steel was holding up cargo plane construction. He said he would like to find out if steel production could be stepped up.

"We have mountains of ore, therefore the bottleneck is in the steel mills," he said.

"Flying Truck."

G. M. Bellanca, a pioneer airplane designer, of Wilmington, Del., said 10,000 to 20,000 "simple" cargo planes, instead of complicated fancy planes or bombers, were needed to transport tanks and supplies, as well as troops and equipment, to the battle fronts.

He described the need as a flying "truck, a barge, a big bus," which he said could be made of plywood with semi-skilled labor in the shortest amount of time. Such planes would carry a 28,000-pound tank, two to four fighter planes, or 100 fully equipped soldiers a distance up to 4,000 miles.

Bellanca, who is building training bombers for the government now, offered to build from his company, the Bellanca Aircraft Corporation, and work for the government without pay in the development of his idea.

Describing his proposal as a plan for the future, Bellanca said for the present the government should build as many of the present, proven types of transport planes as possible.

Bellanca said he thought, with Kaiser, that the motor factories could increase their output of engines. He also agreed with Lee that the Mars flying boat could be built in the shipyards, as Kaiser proposed.

David J. Little, San Antonio, Texas, engineer, told the subcommittee of an idea for a giant 350,000-pound lighter-than-air ship, filled with hydrogen gas, which could carry a 1,000,000-pound payload across the Atlantic in the stratosphere. It would be covered with cloth from 200 bales of cotton, and would have plenty of device to prevent the explosion of the hydrogen.

Blacklisted Uruguayan Radio Station Wrecked

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Aug. 5. (AP)—A tremendous explosion early today wrecked buildings occupied by short-wave radio station CXA2, which is operated by Radio Continental.

Police said they failed to find any clues immediately. The station is on United States and British blacklists for dealing with the enemy.

German Boats Blasted In Harbor of Ostend

OTTAWA, Aug. 5.—(AP)—Moscow Radio, as heard by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, said today that two German patrol boats were blown up in the harbor of Ostend, Belgium, along with military stores ashore.

The Moscow broadcast indicated the explosions were the work of patriots, saying a number of persons had been arrested.

COMMONS TO RECESS.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—(AP)—While the public still speculated on a possible second front decision, the house of commons agreed today to a short summer recess, its members reassured by Sir Stafford Cripps that they would be recalled in the event of "any unexpected situation."

General Pershing's Son Is Made 2d Lieutenant

FORT BELVOIR, Va., Aug. 5. (AP)—Private Warren Francis Pershing, son of General John J. Pershing, was commissioned a second lieutenant at the engineer school here today.

General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, and other notables attended the ceremonies marking the commissioning of several hundred officer candidates, but the 81-year-old General Pershing was unable to attend.

Lieutenant Pershing planned to visit his father later in the day at Walter Reed hospital, where the general was reported in fair health.

Five members of the city council and a clerk and treasurer were renominated without opposition.

and Henry Hester Jr. was renominated chairman of the city election committee.

Robinson will take office as mayor January 1.

Farmer Offers To Bet Mule On Ellis Arnall

83 Years Old, He Hitches To Hear Candidate.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Aug. 5.—Anyone want to bet a mule in Georgia?

Eighty-three-year-old Henry Clay Etheridge, who lives about three miles out of Milledgeville on the Sparta road, has a first-class mule-fall-trades he'll put up against any mule in Georgia that Ellis Arnall wins the September 9 primary.

Etheridge came to Milledgeville this morning to meet his choice for governor—Ellis Arnall. In a barber shop, he announced his faith in Arnall's election and offered to back his convictions with the mule. The thin, weather-beaten Arnall advocate had brought some tomatoes to town, had sold them for $2.50 and was sending it in to the Arnall campaign headquarters as his contribution toward the expenses of the Arnall campaign.

"And if you hear of anybody in Georgia who wants to bet a mule," he told Arnall, "just let me know." The 83-year-old man later in the day hitchhiked over to Sparta to hear Arnall speak at noon. As a Boy Scout handed him an Arnall leaflet, Henry Clay Etheridge waved it aside and said: "Sonny, I was converted a long time ago—give that to somebody who needs it."

Talmadge Cites State Finances In Greene Talk

Reiterates His Support of Counties Self Government.

GREENSBORO, Ga., Aug. 5.—

(P)—Governor Talmadge, carrying his campaign for a fourth term nomination to northeast Georgia, today said four principles dear to the American people and to Georgians are "white supremacy, state's rights, Jeffersonian democracy and old-time religion."

Both state's rights and Jeffersonian democracy, he said in his prepared address, "reach down to the very fundamentals of our own state government and touch the county unit system."

That system, he said, is based upon the right of local self government. He reiterated previous statements that it will remain intact so long as he is Governor.

Talmadge discussed state finances as applying directly to Greene and surrounding counties, and said he had reduced the state's debt from 29 million dollars to $7,648,545.07.

Greene county received $22,569.24 in gas tax for the year ended June 30, 1940, he said, compared to $28,422.53 this year. He listed other counties in this section as:

Hancock, $22,229.63, compared to $26,285.74; Morgan, $19,086 and $21,238.75; Oconee, $14,664.97 and $19,402.37; Oglethorpe, $21,414.60 and $28,135.37; Putnam, $22,262.36 and $24,772.69, and Taliaferro, $15,339.67 and $17,352.03.

He said the school debt "created by the Rivers-Arnall regime in Greene and surrounding counties, paid by me, were:

"Greene, $16,279.19; Hancock, $17,138.34; Morgan, $13,330.24; Oconee, $13,104.62; Oglethorpe, $17,689.55; Putnam, $10,235.69, and Taliaferro, $9,007.59."

He also discussed old age pensions and aid to the blind and to dependent children.

"I have taken care of your problems when you needed help," the Governor said.

LOITERING CHARGE.

VIDALIA, Ga., Aug. 5.—Five cases for "loitering" were placed on the police court docket by Mayor J. F. Darby this week which indicates that labor is scarce and able-bodied men without visible means of support are expected to take a job or move on to other sections. In each of the cases a warning was given to get a job or have some visible means of support.

Firms at Athens Will Close for Arnall Rally

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 5.—Fully 95 per cent of Athens business concerns today announced they will close during the Ellis Arnall rally here tomorrow afternoon at 5:30 o'clock to join with the Student Political League in welcoming the dynamic young attorney general who is fighting the university's battle with the Talmadge dictatorship.

Meanwhile, the student league is completing plans for the Arnall meeting, which will be held in the downtown section where College avenue and Broad street meet, directly in front of the famous university arch.

T. M. Philpot, field manager here for the Arnall club, which is co-operating with the students, and W. L. Bradberry, chairman of the Arnall organization, said this afternoon many people from adjoining counties plan to attend the Arnall rally, which will be broadcast over Stations WSB, Atlanta, and WGAU, Athens, beginning at 5:30 o'clock. The program, however, will get under way at 5 o'clock, the political league announced.

The meeting tomorrow is one of several to be held by the Student Political League, at which time Arnall will speak. Another meeting will be held in Atlanta. The Red and Black, student newspaper, is planning a special edition to be distributed during the Arnall meeting.

Arnall will be the only speaker on the program, with the exception of the students.

Presiding over the program on which student leaders from the university and its branches and other educational institutions will take part, will be Tom Penland, of Blairsville, campus leader at the university.

Leading members of the student bodies of other institutions who will speak include Kirk Nesbit, president of the Georgia Tech student body; Lucia Rooney, former editor of the Colonnade at Georgia State College for Women; Margaret Hawlerson, president of the student body at South Georgia Teachers College, and Albert Crenshaw, Emory University student leader.

Following the part of the program conducted by the student leaders, Blanchard Battle, of Columbus, graduate student in the College of Arts and Sciences at the university, president of the Phi Kappa Literary Society and colonel in the ROTC unit, will introduce Arnall.

Murrah Named Air

Raid Warden in Glynn

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. BRUNSWICK, Ga., Aug. 5.—

Jack Murrah, of the Georgia Power Company, has been appointed chief air raid warden for Glynn county, to succeed Chief of Police J. E. Register who has been acting as chief air raid warden. The announcement of Murrah's appointment was made by J. Hunter Hopkins, chairman of the local citizens defense committee, because Chief Register and his assistant Sergeant Jimmie Bisson have had to relinquish the work due to the unusual press of official business in connection with the police work.

Murrah has just completed a two weeks' course in all phases of civilian defense training and operations at the University of Florida.

ALL'S WELL.

'You'll Be Elected,' 10,000 Assure Arnall

7,000 Applaud Candidate at Thomson Rally

Throng Stays Faithfully Despite Rain, Gives Noisy Ovation.

By LAMAR Q. BALL.

THOMSON, Ga., Aug. 5.—Seven thousand men and women from a half-dozen counties of eastern Georgia stood fast tonight in a driving rain, refusing to move away from the McDuffie county courthouse lawn, where Ellis Arnall outlined to them the job they must do to restore democracy in Georgia.

Low, black clouds racing eastward deluged these folks from Tallapoosa, Warren, Glascock, Wilkes, Columbia, Richmond, McDuffie and Lincoln counties, but they held fast, silently determined to hear the man who offers them escape from the growing problems of a Georgia dictatorship.

Arnall was given a loud spontaneous ovation, and similar ovations were given representatives from those east Georgia counties as they pledged the election of Arnall at the September primary. Hundreds stood and sat in the wet grass on the courthouse lawn; the offices inside the courthouse were filled with men and women; the square was encircled with packed automobiles, resting hub to hub. Automobiles were parked down the side streets for several blocks in every direction.

Crowd Waits. And the crowds stood and sat for more than two hours, cheering as they heard encouraging news in the battle against Talmadgeism. They heard Judge Oscar Williams, of Crawfordville, in Tallapoosa county, call Talmadge, "the most arrogant and treacherous demagogue."

They heard Judge Williams describe how Talmadge and his emissaries are racing across Georgia "preaching hatred among the races and distorting facts to accomplish their ends." They cheered as they heard Judge Williams recount how Tallapoosa county had pinned the Talmadge label in 1936, 1938 and 1940 and the cheers roared around the square as he predicted the bomb that will burst under Talmadge in 1942 will be heard from "Liberty Hall, the home of the south's greatest commoner, to Sugar Creek."

That crowd roared as Crawford Pilcher, a former representative in the state legislature from Warren county, announced he was supporting Ellis Arnall because of his platform and not because of personalities.

Emergency Fund.

Pilcher ripped into the Talmadge creation of that "so-called emergency fund" by robbing money from the poor rural areas.

"Every plank in Ellis Arnall's platform stands for democracy," said Pilcher. They listened with grim looks as Thomas J. Kent, a former representative from Glascock county, explained the story of how Georgia's dictator is seizing the purse strings, just as dictators begin their seizure of the persons for whom they have nothing but contempt."

"The day of retribution is at hand," said Kent. "The platform of Ellis Arnall will win, not by bayonets or by force, but by the votes of the people." From his wheel chair on the platform, Senator Ben Fortson of Wilkes county, a popular figure in the Georgia legislature, declared that "Talmadge has betrayed every man, woman and child in Georgia."

"The greatest tribute the Talmadge crowd can pay Ellis Arnall," said Fortson, "is by attempting to oppose everyone in Georgia, except Ellis Arnall. They can't say anything against him—and that's a tribute." The crowd roared again as Fortson emphasized his confidence that Arnall would "restore the school systems and rescue the diplomas of the students from the disgraceful state into which they have sunk today—scraps of paper not worth the paper on which the empty words are written."

This man from the legislature told the overland farmers in the crowd:

"It makes me cringe to hear that crowd in the state capitol refer to the farmers as simple people with no understanding or judgment. They say tell the Reubens anything and they'll believe anything."

They roared again as Ed Clary, a banker and a former representative from Columbia county, promised:

"I can promise that Columbia county will go four to one for Ellis Arnall."

Richmond Delegate. The delegate from Richmond county was James M. Hull, of Augusta, a former president of the University of Georgia Alumni Association, who quoted a poem

THAT'S RIGHT, YOU'RE WRONG—When passersby, such as Virginia Forbes (left) and Jean Allen, saw carpenters erecting a fence on the small triangle in front of the Hurt building yesterday, they smiled knowingly and said to themselves, "Aha, this must be the day to establish ownership, according to that peculiar property law." However, it wasn't so, for the fence is in reality a bin to collect metals, rags and rubber in a salvage campaign, sponsored by the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company. The old law, requiring a fence to be set up every several years to establish ownership has been changed. Three metal markers now suffice.

about Talmadge: "I no longer en- thusiasm when he bellows his views and has a mean look in his eyes."

Hull ripped into the Talmadge efforts to stir interracial difficulties in a state where none has existed.

"He has written one of the blackest pages in the history of Georgia," cried Hull, as the crowd gave his thoughts vociferous approval. Hull defended the integrity and honor of President Harmon Caldwell, of the University of Georgia, whose statement of last Sunday has met with the Talmadge displeasure.

Hull praised William Morris, of the Augusta Chronicle, for his decision to quit Talmadge, "with whom he had gone far enough."

"Talmadge," said Hull, "is not in step with today's thinking."

T. Reuben Burnside, who became of no opposition, will be McDuffie's next representative in the legislature, introduced Arnall with a stirring demand for an end to dictatorship. Others on the platform who had contributed to the success of this enthusiastic Arnall meeting were Sheriff Lynn J. Norris, of McDuffie county; J. D. Barton, clerk of court; Judge J. Ben Stovall, who acted as master of ceremonies; and H. A. Price, mayor of Thomson.

Listeners Are Faithful.

As Arnall stepped forward to speak there were members of the audience sitting cross-legged in the wet grass of the courthouse lawn; not a soul had moved in spite of the drenching rains that had fallen intermittently. It was a challenge to the spirit at Moultrie July 4 when the rains dispersed the Talmadge crowd and left the Governor snapping his drenched red gaiters to a mere handful of loyal members of the pay roll.

They came to hear Ellis Arnall tonight and they stayed there in spite of the glowering heavens and the blasts of rainfall. The roars of the crowd and the blasts from automobile horns warmed Arnall to the job before him and he launched in, sticking to the real issues of the campaign and pointing ing out the dangers unless these issues are faced.

He repeated his pledge for an immediate restoration of the schools to their accredited rating; his pledge to make pardon rackets impossible, as well as his pledge to investigate those who have profited by the sales of pardons and paroles in the past, his pledge to help the old-age pensioners; his pledge to reorganize the highway department and to drive out of that department "the disreputable chairman of the board who cracks and eats peanuts and refuses to listen to those who appeal to him for help."

Reiterates Pledge. Arnall reiterated his pledge to make no promises that he can't fulfill. He told the eastern Georgians he didn't want the job of being their governor if it meant he was to have to repay every voter with a job on the state payroll. He recounted his plan of restoring the state auditor to his proper position as an official answerable only to the legislature.

He pledged himself to the restoration of house bill No. 1. He pledged to restore the government of Georgia to the people and to make "it impossible that another governor should be able to arrogate to himself the powers your present governor has seized for himself."

Automobiles and buses wound their way back home through the highways of east Georgia, with the voters of the September primary congratulating themselves they had a man to handle the Talmadge problem. Arnall shook hands with virtually 10,000 persons today—and they all patted him on the back, looked him squarely in the eye and assured him he would be elected.

Linder's Split With Talmadge Still Wide Open

was saying: "Tom and I are all right."

They are not. Linder believes the Governor left him.

So, if you've heard from one of the state patrol that Tom Linder has gone back into the Talmadge house, you can have Tom Linder's word for it, given late Wednesday, August 5, (yesterday) that it just isn't true.

He isn't saying anything for any one.

But he is saying something against the Governor who, Linder says, had a committee to tell people who they had to vote for.

That is what stuck in Linder's craw.

In answer to a question as to whether he had quit Talmadge he said:

"No, he quit me and he quit the farmers of Georgia. He told the farmers they couldn't vote for anyone except who he said they could vote for. It's principle with me. I have no statement except the one I made before. It still stands."

He is in this fight to the finish. He hasn't gone back and he won't go back.

He still stays it's all right with him if they scratch the Talmadge name off the ballot.

He doesn't change his idea about it. What he said on July 4 and on July 10 still goes.

There has been no "agreement."

And won't be.

The Governor, says Tom Linder, quit his own kind of people and went off after others. Tom Linder didn't quit. The Governor is the one that left.

Tom Linder doesn't want his friends to believe anything else.

He made his statement on July 10. It stands. He doesn't need to make another.

Final Results Of Primaries In Four States

Ex-Grid Star, Banker To Battle for Kansas Post.

By The Associated Press.

Tabulations of returns from primaries in four states Tuesday showed the following results:

Kansas: Andrew Schoepel, ex-grid star, and W. H. Burke, banker-stockman, won Republican and Democratic nominations for gubernatorial race. Veteran Republican Senator Arthur Capper faces Democratic former Senator George McGill in the November contest for the United States senate, both winning nomination by wide margins. All congress members were renominated.

Missouri: Young Republican Representative Walter C. Ploeser won renomination over six opponents, to face Democratic Nominee Martin L. Neaf. Unopposed by Republicans, Representatives Dewey Short and Phil A. Bennett will run against Democratic Nominees Ralph C. Max and Sam A. Wear, respectively, in November. Six Democratic representatives hurled opposition to win renomination. Three were unopposed, while Roger S. Slaughter won the party's nomination to succeed veteran Representative Joseph B. Shannon, who was not a candidate.

Virginia: Lopsided primary victories virtually assured Democratic Representatives Howard W. Smith and Clifton A. Woodrum of congressional seats, since the Old Dominion is traditionally Democratic. Senator Carter Glass and seven other congress members were unopposed.

West Virginia: Democratic Governor Matthew M. Neely won senate nomination over former Governor H. G. Kump after rousing battle. Three Democratic representatives, Joe L. Smith, Robert L. Ramsey and John Kee, won renomination. Raymond J. Funkhouser and Chapman Revercomb were still running neck-and-neck for the Republican senatorial nomination. Democratic Senator Joseph Rosier won nomination for the November 3 to January 3 senate term.

Mrs. Roosevelt Rebukes Labor Group as Controlled by Russia

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—(AP)—In a rebuke to Eugene Connolly, left wing leader of the American Labor Party, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt declared today that "I do not wish to be controlled in this country by an American group that, in turn, is controlled by Russia and Russia's interests."

Mrs. Roosevelt asserted in a letter to Connolly that she was surprised to find that another letter she had written, indorsing a statement she believed to have been made by the party as a whole, had been used as a leaflet in the present primary fight between the right and left wings of the party.

"I do not wish you to use my name or my letter again in any publication whatsoever," she said.

Train Fares In the South To Be Raised

Present 1.65 Cent Coach Rate Will Be 2.2 Cents Mile.

Train travelers will have to dig down deeper into their pockets for fares before many weeks.

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday approved an increase for basic passenger coach rates of from 1.65 cents to 2.2 cents a mile for railroads operating in the south.

Passengers from here to Chattanooga will pay $3.01 for a one-way fare instead of the present $2.30. Atlanta to Jacksonville will go up from $5.70 to $7.52; Atlanta to Miami, from $11.45 to $15.22; Atlanta to Birmingham, from $2.80 to $3.67; Atlanta to Montgomery, from $2.90 to $3.85; Atlanta to Washington, from $19.55 to $14.04.

Under the commission's order, the southern railroads must file new tariffs before the increase becomes effective. This, Southeastern Passenger Association officials explained, will require "several weeks."

Southern railroads have long maintained lower fares for coach than lines in other parts of the country. Before a 10 per cent increase some time ago, the southern roads maintained a coach fare of 1.5 cents a mile compared to 2 cents for other sections.

Reporting their passenger operations have been at a heavy loss, southern roads petitioned the I. C. C. July 14 for permission for an increase. The I. C. C. said it had received no protest on the increase.

RAF Continues Raids on Ruhr. Despite Storm

Bombers Penetrate Now To Deliver Explosives in Germany.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—(AP)—The RAF's new determination to raid Germany regardless of weather conditions was carried out with an attack on the Ruhr last night through thunderstorms, solid overcast and even snow at the higher altitudes, the Air Ministry announced today.

"It was like flying through a 'white woolen blanket,'" said the gunner in a Halifax bomber.

There was no indication of the size of the attacking force, but despite the poor weather only one bomber was lost.

One fighter plane was lost on sweeps against trains and other objectives in occupied territory.

TO SHOOT MORE WE MUST TALK LESS

The daily use of long distance and local telephone service throughout the "war busy" Southeast is mounting in such increasing volume that telephone lines and central offices are becoming seriously congested with the burden of calls.

We cannot relieve the congestion by adding to our facilities because the materials needed are now being used in the manufacture of weapons of war (a machine gun in action uses in four minutes enough copper to make a mile and a half of telephone wire), so in order to keep present telephone facilities available for vital war calls we must all talk less.

With your help, which we are confident you will voluntarily give, we can keep long distance and local telephone lines clear for the urgent messages of war agencies, and industries engaged in war work.

War calls must come first—

Here's How You Can Help

Long Distance Calls

- 1 Make only the most necessary long distance calls. Be brief in conversation.
- 2 Place your calls before 9 a. m.; between noon and 2 p. m.; 5 and 7 p. m.; or after 9 p. m.
- 3 Stay near your telephone after you have placed your call.
- 4 Plan what you want to say and so avoid the necessity for another call.
- 5 Whenever possible, call by number.

Local Calls

- 1 Use your telephone sparingly—avoid unnecessary calls.
- 2 Be sure to replace your receiver on hook.
- 3 Look up numbers you are not sure of and help avoid the calling of wrong numbers.
- 4 Make your conversations brief.
- 5 Teach your children good telephone habits.

A Summer of Bad News

Only the news of the battle of Midway and the success in the Coral Sea kept the summer months already gone from being months of nothing but bad news.

Our losses in those engagements were severe, but relatively light when measured against the losses of the enemy. It becomes more and more evident that in this modern war, with modern weapons, no engagement can be fought without losses.

It is well to recall, and it is of bitter comfort to recall, that our leaders told us well before the summer that this would be a summer of bad news.

It is comforting only that our leaders were aware of what was ahead.

It is a time for faith.

It is a time for calm thinking which will tell us again that we are up against enemies whose governments were devoted for at least seven to 10 years to the task of building up trained armies and equipment.

It is a time for recalling that we had one year of preparation before war came and that, measured against any past performance, our progress and our achievements have been remarkable.

There have been, and will be more, scandals. They are as nothing compared to the ones of the War Between the States, the Spanish-American War or the first World War.

We have had defeat such as we have never had before for the reason we are in a war on a scale never before attempted.

The summer is not yet gone. There undoubtedly will be more news, some of which will be unpleasant and bad. We must keep in mind the fact that well before summer came our leaders knew, and told us, it would be that way.

One may take a just pride in most of our effort.

One must recall that we are up against the effort of 10 years by other nations and that the odds were against us when we started.

It is no time for petty questions or unworthy fears.

Such doubts and fears are unworthy of the men who fight for us and those who train to fight.

It is a time for faith and work.

Civilians at War

What is the most urgent immediate problem of the war?

Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war, declares that shortages of raw materials have replaced transport of finished supplies as the major worry of the men responsible for guiding America to victory.

"More raw materials must be made available to the Army and Navy," Mr. Patterson says, "and less for comforts and conveniences of civilian life."

Only a drastic tightening of civilian economy, he points out, can relieve the serious shortages checking vital war production.

What does this mean to you and me?

It means that the determination and willingness to sacrifice of the people left at home are as important to final victory as are the courage and military skill of the men upon the battlefield.

Factories pouring out tanks, guns, planes and other badly needed munitions already are consuming countless tons of raw materials once used for civilian luxuries that were considered necessities. And, Mr. Patterson says, an ever-increasing quantity of these important raw materials must flow into our war machine. America will meet this challenge.

It means the sacrificing of many things to which we have been accustomed all our lives. It means inconvenience. Even hardship.

But America will not grumble. America will face the fact that a corner of this world-wide battlefield is in every living-room in the nation. America will face this fact—and triumph.

—VICTORY IS WORTH ANY PRICE!—

Right, Mr. President

The President has said that if there are those guilty of hoarding steel and selling it in violation of the regulation while certain war efforts are slowed because of a shortage of steel, they should be sent to jail.

The nation will echo that, adding, "In a hurry, too."

The nation is tired of so much time spent in trying the saboteurs who came as spies.

The nation grows angry each time some rat of a profiteer or enemy of the war effort is not put in jail.

The "black market" in steel should be investigated quickly and justice meted out in the same tempo.

"Black market" is a new word the war has given us.

Actually it is nothing but "bootlegger." Let's send the guilty to jail. In a hurry.

Taxes Equal Cotton Crop

Much surprise has been expressed throughout Georgia since the state auditor announced that taxes collected in the state during the last fiscal year ending June 30, totaled the unequaled and staggering sum of $58,893,568, which was more than $6,000,000 collected the year before; was $13,204,877 more than for the year ending June 30, 1940, and $15,530,568 more than for the year ending June, 1939, the last two years under a governor other than Talmadge.

The tax bill collected last year by Governor Talmadge and his tax gatherers equaled the cash value of Georgia's entire cotton crop with peaches and pecans thrown in for good measure. The state's cotton crop last year, the lint, was valued at $51,480,000, seven million dollars under the tax load. But when you throw in the income from the peach crop, $4,000,000 and the income from the pecan crop, $2,000,000, you have the income from three major crops in the state required to pay the tax bill.

It took more money than every bale of cotton grown in Georgia last year to pay the Talmadge tax bill! Every ounce of energy expended by Georgia farmers in the hot sun to grow 625,000 bales of cotton went toward the tax bill! And when it was sold, it still lacked seven millions of being enough to fill the Talmadge tax bill.

It is also a notable fact that during the last 10 years, during which time Talmadge has served more than half of that time as governor of the state, the tax burden has doubled. The taxes collected in the state in 1932 totaled $28,491,000 and 10 years later, in 1942, they amounted to $58,893,568. Since 1932 Talmadge has served as governor five and one-half years.

A Growing Danger

From Chungking comes a report that Lieutenant General Tomoyuki Yamashita, Tokyo's German-trained conqueror of Malaya, is now in Manchukuo, "possibly to take up the supreme command there in preparation for an attack on Siberia."

It is known that the Japanese army in northern Manchuria has recently been reinforced, and there are persistent reports of Japanese concentrations near the borders of Russian-controlled Outer Mongolia.

With the battered Soviet armies struggling to defend the Caucasus, the treacherous militarists of Japan may feel the time is ripe for a new stab in the back.

If Japan does strike at Russia, America must be prepared to speed all possible help to the Siberian front. Everything in our power should be done now to drive the Japanese from the Aleutians, where they are in a position to interfere with our direct line of communications with eastern Siberia.

Vladivostok must be held. Our strategists in Washington should not forget that this great Russian fortress and the Kamchatka peninsula are the best possible bases from which Japan can be beaten to her knees from the air.

MASKS NEEDED

(From The Albany Herald.)
It seems to be in order to wonder if gas masks are destined to become standard equipment for political rallies. What was described as a "mustard gas in cans" was thrown into a section of the crowd at Governor Talmadge's meeting at Statesboro Tuesday, and a former candidate for governor now employed in the State Revenue Department was arrested charged with throwing the stuff. Civilian defense authorities may have a chance to perform a great public service by lending gas masks to crowds attending Georgia political gatherings, and the experience thus gained might prove valuable later on.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

SIBERIAN ATTACK WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Allied military intelligence has received an accumulation of information pointing to a Japanese attack on Siberia this month.

Rarely have military men been so certain of an impending event. Chinese, British and American intelligence all seem to agree that the new Japanese move is planned for August. From August to October the weather will be dry—perfect for military operations.

Chinese sources, which in the past have been extremely reliable on Japanese troop movements, have reported greatly increased military activity in Manchukuo. Varying estimates place the number of men the Japs have concentrated there as between 450,000 and 900,000. The attack on Russia through Siberia will take place in this quarter when it comes.

Since Midway and the Coral Sea naval defeats the Japs have been strangely silent. Outside of minor activities in New Guinea and the Aleutian Islands, nothing much has been heard from them. This silence denotes a preoccupation with the Siberian plans.

For some weeks the Japs appear to have been augmenting their ground forces in Manchukuo and Korea. Undoubtedly the Germans have been pressing them to attack. Certain informed sources believe that Tokyo promised Berlin a year ago to launch the attack when the Germans reached the Volga. The Nazis are practically there now.

All of this information has been in the hands of the Allied high command for months and more. The Russians are not asleep to the possibilities. Not only are they supposed to have sufficient reserves posted in the Siberian area to meet the situation, but they are understood to have developed an elaborate system of air bases there for immediate use against Japanese cities if hostilities break out.

ALLIED PLANS What our own plans may be for coming to Russia's aid, we can only surmise. Certainly they are of the greatest military secrecy. But it can be fairly assumed that we have elaborate preparations ready to be set in motion at a moment's notice. The main British and American emphasis now is on keeping Russia in the war. Our policy has been not to bother a great deal about the Japanese, except defensively, until Hitler is knocked out. Then we will give the treacherous little Japs our undivided attention until they are chased out of every foot of occupied territory in the Pacific.

But if the Japs strike at Russia we will, in order to render the Soviets every possible support, have to change our present defensive policy to one of aggressive action. One of the early moves we would be expected to make would be to send a task force against many of the island outposts the Japs have occupied in the Pacific. Taking advantage of the concentration of Japanese air forces in Siberia, we should be able to run them out of Wake, Guam, the Marshall group of islands and many others that have an important strategic value. General MacArthur might even launch an offensive against the Malay Peninsula.

Far more important in our plans, however, must be provision for utilizing the Aleutian Islands as a stepping-off place for a wholesale air assault on Japanese cities. With bases open to us in Siberia, it would be possible to send hordes of our great heavy bombers over Japanese cities, thence on to refueling bases in Russia. We can't do it now because the planes don't have enough range to make the return flight.

Presumably we have enough of the big bombers on hand now to wreak destruction on Japan. Thanks to President Roosevelt's great foresight, we undertook a vast expansion in our heavy bomber construction program at least six months before Pearl Harbor. That program called for turning out a minimum of 500 of the big bombers monthly by the middle of 1942, which is already behind us. We are now scheduled to schedule on to schedule on production. Boeing Aircraft Corporation alone is turning out 100 of the great flying fortresses every month. Martin, Consolidated, Douglas and others, not to name them all, are doing equally well.

BOMBERS READY The point of it is that already—today—we are producing at least 500 of the big, long-distance bombers monthly. This in turn means that we must have a considerable fleet of them ready for action over and above those that have been sent to England, Iceland, Australia and the Near East. Certainly, we should be able to muster up a month's output for exclusive use against Japan, if and when the opportunity arises to use them.

The bombers would be sent against Japan from Dutch Harbor in the Aleutian chain. They could be flown to Dutch Harbor in easy stages from our west coast by way of Alaska. Beyond doubt, many of them are there now in anticipation of the Jap move. Others must be in Alaska and Canada ready for the westward flight.

None of this takes into account what the Russians themselves have planned for the Japs if hostilities are to start. Vladivostok, the Russian port on the Sea of Japan, is only 700 miles from Tokyo—an easy bombing distance. The Japs would be certain to try to cut this off immediately. But the entire region is supposed to have been studded with airports suitable for use of bombers against Japan.

When the final facts are out, it would not be surprising to learn that American Army technicians have been quietly working in the Siberian sector ever since Pearl Harbor. They would be there making arrangements for the reception of American bombers when the time comes for action.

If for some reason the Jap attack on Siberia fails to materialize, it will be because of these preparations. Although Russia would be clearly put at a disadvantage to defend herself here while engaged in a mortal struggle with the Germans on the European front, she nevertheless is in position to deliver, in conjunction with our own forces, a devastating blow on Japanese cities. Only the knowledge of this has restrained the Japs from moving heretofore.

WONDERS IF PEGLER

Editor, Constitution: Was it a "misprint" in Ralph McGill's recent column that Westbrook Pegler is a "kindly, soft-spoken, amiable person, modest and retiring"? If Mr. Pegler has these commendable traits, it does seem to me he would not "dip his pen in gall" when writing about people who are having hearts and hands burdened, trying to save our boys and our country. The nasty things he writes about our great President and our wonderful First Lady really should be barred from all publications. I have often wished Mr. Pegler would write kindly, interesting things, if he knows how.

Editor, Constitution: Is Governor Talmadge's "vest pocket" large enough to hold 100,000 votes? Frankly, I believe it is! SAYS LODGE

OPPOSED WILSON

Editor, Constitution: In a recent edition was reported a criticism by a member of congress of the secretary of war for commending certain military services of the late Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, who is a candidate for re-election. In connection with this senator's candidacy, it should be remembered that Senator Lodge was a senator from Massachusetts at the time when the question of the United States entering the League of Nations came before the country and its senate. The elder Lodge was opposed to our going into the League, and he was the only senator and, finally, with the aid of some dissident Democrats, the proposal was defeated by Lodge and his Republican followers. This was the end of President Wilson's plan to render impossible another World War. It is no exaggeration to say that the establishment of a League of Nations was the cherished ambition of Wilson's whole life. He did not long survive the defeat of it. Now a multitude of our people believe that the present war might never have occurred if we had joined and zealously upheld the League of Nations in its ideal of outlawing war.

Senator Lodge was an extreme isolationist. The next generation after him have found to their sorrow that isolation is impossible.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

New York NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—With the possible exception of the time that Big Bill Thompson appealed to the voters of Chicago with a promise to punch King George on the snout, issue, which, up to now, has been paramount in the New York campaign for the governorship, is the silliest that has ever belittled the intelligence of an American community.

Jim Farley is accusing Senator Jim Mead, the New Deal candidate, of having expressed isolationist sentiments back in February, 1941, the idea being that he is, therefore, unworthy of the President's support.

Of course, it was the President himself, who introduced this issue when he indicated that anyone qualifying for his support must have upheld his war program before Pearl Harbor. Mr. Farley insists that his candidate for the democratic nomination, John Bennett, answers the description. Tom Dewey, who probably will be the Republican nominee, does not, and doesn't pretend to.

But all three of these men are loyal Americans and it would be fantastic to suggest that any of them, if elected governor, would do anything to obstruct the President's direction and management of the national effort to win the war, would withhold any cooperation.

Unfair What they thought about the war before Pearl Harbor is water over the dam now and the only question really before the voters is which one would make the best Governor. If, as Mr. Farley says, as recently as 1941 Mead thought this country had no business imposing American ideas on other countries, he was a member of the vast majority of American citizens, many of whom undoubtedly still cling to the same belief, but support the war as a matter of life and death. In fact, there are many men in uniform who will give their lives for the United States who fight only for nationalistic patriotism and to punish a wicked enemy. It is grievously unfair and it certainly is unwise to suggest that men who have not been in uniform give lives for their country are Americans of doubtful reliability.

It is unwise because unity, for which the President's political supporters yearn, will not be served by impugning the loyalty of so large a number of good citizens. The American people did not want war and they hoped blindly, wishfully disbelieving the evidence daily revealed in Europe and Asia, that this country might somehow manage to keep out of the war. But when the Japs took Pearl Harbor and Hitler declared war on the whole people, with a few miserable exceptions, accepted the situation and the President has practically unanimous support against the enemy ever since.

In the state elections, therefore, the issue is not an issue at all. Any man who appealed to the voters today with a promise that he would oppose the President in the prosecution of the war would need a military guard to protect his life, and in New York, Dewey is as good a patriot as either of the candidates or the President himself.

Dangerous The aggravation of this question is a dangerous business because it happens that the President's political following includes many clamorous individuals who pretend to speak for the administration and heap insults on all who disagree with him or on domestic issues. Under our system it is entirely correct to conduct a political opposition to the party in power and such opposition cannot decently be described as "fraternalism." The fact that the country is at war does not alter the case unless there is a proposition before the people to suspend the system and adopt one something like Hitler's for the duration of the war against Hitlerism.

Mud has no qualifications for the job as Governor, but to attack him because of what he said almost 18 months ago, when there was still hope of escaping war, is to accept President Roosevelt's own prescribed test of eligibility. Bennett is said to have made some remarks himself back in the days of peace which might be interpreted as condemnation of the dictatorships of Europe, but the question now is not one of the international affairs. Anyone who suggests that Bennett or Dewey or the Jew safe as Governor is suggesting, without saying so, that this man would help the enemy and that is just too outrageous for consideration.

Congregation Beth Israel Ralph McGill's article in The Constitution under date of July 13 was brought to their attention and read. The board instructed their secretary to express to you their appreciation of this splendid article setting forth the status of the Jews of our great country in the present war effort. We agree with you thoroughly that this is campaign propaganda intended to create suspicion among the various groups in our nation, and while at present it is mainly directed at the Jews, no doubt at a later date it would be extended to other groups.

It is not our desire, as Jews, to be commended for any patriotic effort, for we feel that we are doing no more than any other citizen should do for the welfare of his country. We do, however, appreciate your effort to put before the public a fair statement of facts feeling we are justly entitled to this consideration. We believe, further, that more information along these lines would tend to create a finer attitude among all groups and will defeat the purpose of our enemies.

The writer wishes to add to this his personal appreciation of the article and to again express the appreciation of our congregation.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

IF YOUR BOY IS IN ENGLAND Maybe your boy is in Ireland. Maybe your boy is in England. Maybe he will get a two-day leave and go down to London.

Maybe you've been wondering how he'd be treated there when he goes to see the old tower, the old bridge, the old streets, the cathedrals, Nelson's monument at Trafalgar square, what's left of Piccadilly Circus, and all the other places he has heard about.

Well, I've just read a letter from a corporal, an Atlanta boy, Corporal Jack Eiseeman, who went in as a private and was sent overseas with his outfit. He had his first liberty in London. He liked it. He liked the Red Cross.

I think all parents with boys in England will like to read it. It reads:

"Dear Folks—I have just finished a very strenuous two days in London, so this will more than likely be a very strenuous letter. I will try to hold myself together long enough to finish it, however, and in case I wander off the track now and then, just overlook it.

"George and I really had the times of our lives. We sight-saw, ate, slept, walked, and rested in a pub now and then. We also went to two musicals, including one in which Beatrice Lilly was the main attraction. The latter was really swell and we enjoyed it tremendously. The former was somewhat like a burlesque would be at home. We enjoyed it, too.

"We stayed at the Washington club, a hotel sponsored by the American Red Cross. For half a crown, about 60 cents, we had a private room with twin beds which were the most comfortable beds I've ever slept in, a private bat with a bathtub large enough to swim in, which we did, and breakfast. The Red Cross also provided us with tickets to the 'Big Top'—that's the one with Beatrice Lilly, and all sorts of little odds and ends to make our stay more enjoyable. You may subscribe to the above-mentioned organization any sum you deem fitting. They are really nice people over here.

"One night we took up with an English flying officer who took us to one of the swank places about town. We found ourselves the only Americans among officers from all over the world. I had a long talk with two men from Czechoslovakia. There were Canadians, New Zealanders, South Africans, Belgians, Frenchmen and others.

"In all seriousness, we were treated with wonderful hospitality, and after having taken a look at parts of London you must really give them all the respect and admiration in the world for the way they have gone through the war and how they are keeping on living almost normal lives in spite of all that has happened here.

"I'll have to stop now as it is supper time and that is quite an occasion here, one which I never miss. Give all the family my love—Jack Eiseeman."

That's a good letter.

THE RED CROSS AND USO This corporal might be your boy. Any soldier, private, corporal or sergeant, can use that hotel because the American Red Cross has done the job.

The Red Cross and the USO are reaching out into every camp as fast as organization will permit.

We have not been in this war very long.

It takes time to organize and to become effective. One may hear criticism of these organizations because the coffee wasn't ready or because they weren't present at some camp. That's too bad. But meaningless. After all, the funds are not great. And new camps spring up quickly. And expand even quicker.

The USO organization is new. But it is doing a great job.

All over this country there are volunteers washing dishes, waiting on table, making coffee, cooking food, serving it to soldiers. That slogan—"You help someone you know when you help the USO"—is a good one. And a true one.

IN IRELAND I remember Londonderry and Belfast, where many of our soldiers are. Londonderry, old Derry, with its great wide city walls centuries old; the harbor and the green hills. I like to think of our soldiers there.

Belfast, a busy, bustling city with its harbor and its wide streets. I can picture our soldiers and marines there, sipping the Irish girls, taking "the Londonderry air."

At Londonderry they are near the county of Donegal and the thatched cottages of the country, the turf-cutters, and the small donkeys laden with turf and faggots. They are not far from the pounding sea. They have seen the rock walls and the gorse golden in them and the hawthorne white as snow. They have heard the cuckoo sing and heard and seen the lark go blustering up into the air, singing madly. They have tasted the dark Irish stout from Dublin, Guinness stout, called the "wine of Liffey." They have heard the clipped speech and met the Irish people.

When the war is done we'll know one another better. And maybe that will have a great effect on us.

It will be, one may be sure, a grand thing when the boys come back from Africa and Egypt and Ireland and from the northern snows and from the far tropics and all the islands of the world and begin to tell their stories.

Way down here in the land of cotton
The old stump speeches are not forgotten!
The dear old farmer with hands so horny
Turns his ear to the speeches corny.
The talk is slick and the stumps are sicker...
There's barbeque and a lot of likker
And it may sound foolish or sad or funny.
(When they promise a land of milk and honey)
The Johnnie Publics, who pay the taxes
Poke out their necks to get the aches.
The crops may fail and the cattle perish
But still we have this thought to cherish—
As long as the sun shines, or it's raining,
We'll keep on with our campaign-ing
We'll have plenty of fiery speeches
From city streets to the woodland reaches...
We'll have plenty of old mud slinging,
Snapping suspenders and quartet singing.
The plow may rust in the half-run furrow
And the hen-house serve as the fowls' burrow,
The fences fall in the twisting briars
And the woods go up in forest fires—
But the generations yet unborn
Will always have a supply of "corn."
And I don't mean the kind that is meant for juggling
But the kind that the demagogues keep plugging.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON

AID-CONTROL.

In the midst of the stress and tension incident to the all-out war effort, the average citizen is likely finding little time for consideration of Senate Bill 1313, introduced in 1941 by Senator Thomas U. Taylor, and amended this year by Senator Hill, Ala.

The title of this bill reads: "A bill to promote the general welfare through appropriations of funds to assist the states and territories in reducing inequalities of educational opportunities through elementary and secondary schools." Section 1 of the bill is a statement of policy.

I quote the section in full:

"No department, agency, or officer of the United States shall exercise any supervision or control over any school with respect to which any funds are expended pursuant to this act, nor shall any term or condition of any agreement under this act relating to any contribution made under this act to or on behalf of any school or state educational agency authorize any agency or officer of the United States to control the administration, personnel, curriculum, instruction, methods of instruction, or materials of instruction, it being intended that the control and supervision of public schools shall remain solely a state function, or a local function under state law."

The bill proposes an appropriation of $300,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1943. Georgia would receive approximately $15,000,000 under this bill.

And I have to say that I am advocating its passage. And I may say in passing that all the candidates for public office are in favor of the bill, and the Georgia Educational Association is in favor of the bill.

I have tried to learn all I could about this bill, since it has to do with the public schools, and since the public schools are so vital in maintaining a democracy. I have read the many details of the bill, with the amendments by Senator Hill. And I have tried to keep up with the debates on the bill, through the Congressional Record, also the discussions of the bill outside congress. I was interested, for example, to see what Governor Payne Ratner, of Kansas, had to say about the bill at the recent meeting of the National Education Association in Denver.

He is quoted as saying:

"Federal aid for public education can be a two-edged sword, because it may result in federal control. Federal aid of any kind may or may not mean federal control. But all too often the power which holds the purse strings also holds the noose which strangles free institutions. We have discovered the 'iron hand in the velvet glove' in such matters as federal aid to highways, social welfare and the employment program. In almost every instance involving federal aid, we have found insistence upon federal control. That sort of federal aid to our schools would sound the death knell of democracy in America."

I wrote a number of outstanding people in the nation—people who understand the genius of our constitution as an instrument for the protection and encouragement of democracy, asking them to tell me what they thought of Senate Bill 1313. I hope to continue this discussion tomorrow, quoting some of these opinions.

Let me say in passing that I want to see better schools, which means there must be better teachers and better equipment, and that means, perhaps, more money, but isn't there an old axiom to the effect that "We pay for what we get?"

Whether you have a few suitcases or many items of furniture to be removed, you can find somebody for the job by turning to Classification 84—"Moving and Storage."

On the Record

In several weekly newspapers which reach the exchange desk—and which I grab for a once-over—appear records of the session of the superior court in its visit of the previous week. In which names of culprits and what happened to them are revealed.

I have before me, as the politicians say, such a newspaper. It reports such items as this—

"Billy John Whorheit: Driving while drunk. Fined $50 and costs."

"Amos Q. Dingbat: Using profane language in presence of ladies. Non-prossed upon payment of costs."

There's a full column of such items. I think they may have a salutary (if that's the word) influence upon the culprits. Having your name in print as a sinner is a fearful thing.

Time was when city newspapers printed everything that turned up in police court. Even an ordinary drunk and disorderly was recorded. That was hell for city editors, for weeping mothers and glowering fathers came up and wanted to keep Jim's name out of the paper.

Away back yonder Gordon Noel Hurst of The Constitution wrote a most interesting review of the day's doings in police court. With names. That was in the days of "Jedge Briles" as he was known to his regular clients. Now Justice Nash Broyles of the court of appeals and rated as a most able jurist.

Hurst viewed all the crop that appeared before Jedge Briles. His stuff was highly humorous, except to the culprits involved. It made good reading.

But newspapers outgrew this "neighborhood news." Space became too valuable to record wife-beatings, drunks—plain or disorderly—back alley cutting scrapes. You don't see a story any more about such little affairs unless they result in sudden death.

On the whole, that a good thing. How many of us would enjoy seeing in the public press that we'd been pinched for speeding or parking next to a fireplug?

But, on the other hand, if the press would reprint the police docket of persons arrested for this and that, it would make most interesting reading.

There's nothing that most of us enjoy more than seeing in print

Heated Debate Marks Session Of Commission

Political Factions Exchange Blows; Clerk at Camp Resigns.

Politics of factions in the Fulton county commission flared into the open yesterday in one of the most bitter outbreaks in several years as members of the group aligned themselves for the September 9 primary in which nominations for three of the five commission posts will be made.

Meeting at the courthouse for the regular August session, the commissioners launched a factional battle which was climaxed by the resignation of Henry Coleman, clerk of a convict camp, who said he had pressure brought on him because he had political posters of Dr. Charles Ross Adams, one of the commissioners for re-election, in his place of business at East Point.

He said, however, none of the commissioners had brought the pressure.

Attack by Hailey.

The battle was joined when Commissioner I. Glover Hailey arose early in the session to attack Dr. Adams, chairman of the public works committee, for not purchasing 100,000 gallons of asphalt immediately to repair roads throughout the county.

Adams said orders from Harold Ickes, petroleum co-ordinator, had prevented the purchase. Hailey said priorities now are available for the purchase of 100,000 gallons, and charged that Adams did not want to order it "because he would make some people unhappy before the election if their roads could not be repaired."

Hailey insisted the 100,000 gallons be bought, and the commission authorized Mose Holland, county purchasing agent, to make the purchase in accordance with the approved priority.

Heated Debate.

Holland, A. Clark, county warden; Turner McDonald, county engineer; James Collier, negro employee at the Adams park golf house, and C. M. (Mac) Bolen, former city councilman and identified as one of Dr. Adams' campaign advisers, were among those who questioned him talked during the debate, which lasted more than an hour.

H. A. Ware opened the controversy when he asked for repairs on Piedmont road.

Dr. Adams insisted the county probably could undertake to complete Peachtree road, but Piedmont road and Brown Mill roads would have to wait.

Hailey then demanded how East Point and College Park could buy asphalt when Fulton county could not do so even with a priority for 100,000 gallons.

Hailey said he was called by a member of the grand jury and informed of the priority. He accused Dr. Adams of "being afraid of making someone unhappy just before election because we can't pave all the roads in the county, but for that reason we should not neglect to repair others when they injure tires at this crucial time."

He then criticized Adams because the park building program was not brought to the board. He said he had resisted one man control of the county since he had been a commission member, and would continue to do so as long

No Kisses on V-Mail Letters War Department Asks Girls

You may love your soldier man dearly, but the War Department asks that you refrain from imprinting a kiss on V-mail letters to him.

Contained in the latest list of instructions regarding this super-fast mail service to soldiers on foreign duty, the advice against kissing the epistles is given because lipstick may smear and make the writing illegible when the letter is photographed for transmission abroad.

The V-mail service has been extended on a two-way basis to the United Kingdom, the middle east, Hawaii and Australia, and will be further extended to reach soldiers stationed elsewhere on the world battle fronts, it was announced.

Since this new mail service was started, about six weeks ago, approximately 250,000 letters have been delivered.

To facilitate the delivery of V-mail letters, the army postal service urges that those using the service carefully follow the instructions printed on the V-mail form. It is imperative that the complete address of the sender and addressee be printed plainly in block letters in the panel provided for this purpose. Reason for this is that the letters are photographed on microfilm and only clearly printed letters will reproduce properly when photographic prints are made from the microfilm.

Because a photographic copy of your original V-letter is what will reach the soldier in the field, writers are instructed to write on one side of the paper only and to make no enclosures.

Special forms for V-mail may be obtained at the post office.

Two Meetings To Be Held by Truck Drivers

Sessions Sunday To Discuss Transportation Problems.

Two meetings expected to assemble more than 1,000 local truck drivers will be held here Sunday at the request of Joseph D. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, it was announced yesterday.

The first meeting, sponsored by the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers, Local No. 728, will be held at 12:30 o'clock at Shatterly's lake, one mile south of South river on the old Jonesboro road, J. L. Hitchcock, business representative of the union, announced. The affair, which will be a fish fry, will be attended by almost the entire membership of the local union, it was said.

Invited to address the group are John G. Caley, regional director of the ODT; M. L. McWhorter, of the Georgia Public Service Commission; R. M. Springfield, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and Judge Luke Arnold, recorder of the Atlanta traffic court.

The second meeting, which will assemble some 200 drivers, is scheduled for 3:30 o'clock at 10 Krog street. Speakers will be Caley, McWhorter and Springfield.

Discussion at both meetings will center around ODT plans for conservation of tires, maintenance of equipment and related topics, and will stress the 40-mile an hour speed limit being enforced in Georgia.

Three Soldiers Made Citizens

Three Canadian-born soldiers serving in the Army of the United States in Georgia posts yesterday became citizens of the nation they are already serving in naturalization proceedings held before United States District Judge Robert L. Russell.

Judge Russell, who interrupted proceedings in a civil case, administered the oath of allegiance. They became Americans under an executive order which enables aliens serving in the armed forces to become citizens without the long period between application and naturalization ceremonies.

The new Americans are Harold James Magee, 24, of Lewisville, V. B. sergeant technician, of Fort Benning; Robert Edwin MacRae, 24, Bridgewater, Nova Scotia, corporal technician, attached to the medical department, Fort Oglethorpe, and Rosaire Joseph Trefle, 25, of Lobiniere, Canada, technician fifth grade, on detached duty at Athens.

B-17 Hits Back At Attackers; Downs 4 of 6

American Pursuit Planes Also Destroys Zeroes Without Loss.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—(P)—The War Department reported today that an Army Boeing B-17 heavy bomber, on a photographic mission over the Pacific, shot down four of six Japanese fighter planes which attacked it near Wake Island on July 31.

The two remaining enemy fighters turned and fled, the department said. Three of the planes shot down were Japanese Zeroes, and the fourth was believed to be a Heinkel 112.

In another report of American planes in action against the celebrated Zeroes, the department said that 10 of these Japanese craft were shot down by Army Air Force fighters during Japanese attacks on Hengyang, China, July 30-31.

The department said a report received from China disclosed that 27 Japanese Zeroes attacking Hengyang July 30 were met by American pursuit ships which downed four of the enemy without loss to themselves.

The following day 35 Zeroes repeated the attack. They were engaged by 15 American pursuit pilots, who confirmed destruction of six Japanese planes and probably destroyed three others, again without loss of planes or pilots by the Americans.

12 Are Killed, 36 Hurt in Bus, Train Collision

Vehicle Hurlled Through Air After Crash in Mississippi.

CRYSTAL SPRINGS, Miss., Aug. 5.—(P)—At least 12 persons were killed and at least 36 injured in a bus and passenger train collision in the heart of this city today.

Most of the casualties were bus passengers, but one woman was killed and two others hurt when the heavy bus was hurled through the air and overturned on the sidewalk where they were standing. The bus was partially unroofed and dead and injured were scattered along the tracks.

Train passengers escaped serious harm and the train was not derailed.

Medical facilities here and at near-by Hazlehurst and Brookhaven were strained and many victims were taken to Jackson, which rushed all available ambulances to the scene.

State Public Safety Commissioner T. P. Brady said the bus driver stopped to let a freight train pass, then started across without seeing the fast passenger train coming on another track.

U. S. and Cuba Conclude Plans for Big Air Base

HAVANA, Aug. 5.—(P)—Secretary of State Jose M. Cortina announced today that negotiations between the United States and Cuba for establishment of a big air base in San Julian, Pinar del Rio Province, had been concluded, illustrating the "extraordinary" co-operation between the two nations.

Whiteout Yarns Make Rounds; Have You Heard the Latest?

Have you heard the latest stories on Monday night's whiteout? They're making the rounds now. Colonel Richard Job, of the State Citizens' Defense committee, went out to East Point to see what happened at the control center.

En route to East Point he came across a wreck. Two automobiles had collided and five persons were scattered around the street, their faces dripping red.

In a hurry, Colonel Job didn't tarry, but when he got to the control center, he checked to find out what had been done for the injured.

Not until then did he find out the wreck was part of the whiteout. Willy East Pointers had borrowed two thoroughly wrecked cars from a junk dealer and put mercurchrome on the "injured."

Then there was the auxiliary policeman who kidded his superior officer with neatness.

Oliver Healey, a member of the mounted police in the Buckhead unit, called Major Trammell Scott Tuesday morning about 11 o'clock, the story goes. That was 12 hours after the show was over.

"This is Policeman Healey reporting," said he. "I am at the corner of West Pace's Ferry and the Marietta highway ready for duty."

Major Scott had no comeback, not realizing for a moment that he was being ribbed.

And then there was the rumor which spread rapidly.

Four persons were rumored killed when the mouths had been busy passing the news along for a while.

Traced to its source, the rumor, of course, was false.

But four sirens of the 225 in the city were dead and didn't scream during the whiteout.

Funny how things get started, isn't it?

Just three days more!

WPB Restricts U. S. Imports To 500 Items on 'Vital' List

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—(P)—The War Production Board today restricted imports into the United States to some 500 items on an "emergency shipping priorities list."

Only items on this list will be assigned shipping space on vessels controlled by the War Shipping Administration and bound for the United States, with minor exceptions, WPB announced.

In instances where shipping space has not been entirely taken, NO ASPIRIN FASTER up by listed goods, imports of certain low-rated cargoes, such as bananas, Scotch whisky and rum, will be permitted from the Caribbean area, United States territories and possessions, the British Isles, Canada and Newfoundland.

The emergency priorities list covers such items as oils, wool, sugar, copper and other ores, coffee, hides and skins, rubber and spices.

The War Shipping Administration will limit cargoes carried on its ships to save shipping time, it was pointed out, and in instances where vessels unload at foreign ports and are unable to find cargoes of items on the priorities list, they will return empty.

CALL 15 MINUTES BEFORE YOU NEED A TAXI

We have a vital responsibility to meet. Somehow we must keep the taxis rolling for those who simply MUST have them. Folks with sickness in the family; nurses; old people; War-industry executives. There are so many trips where a taxi is essential, because in this town there's no other way to get there in a hurry.

So try to give us at least 15 minutes notice. That way we can send a taxi which has just dropped a passenger somewhere near you, instead of "deadheading" one all the way out from the garage.

That way you help us save rubber that cannot be replaced when it is gone—and wear and tear on taxis that also cannot be replaced when they wear out. We have a big fleet. We are nursing each Taxi like a baby. But there's a limit to everything.

Help us keep Taxis serving you for the duration.

Getting The Range at Fort Mac

For a long time O'Donald Mays has been writing about the war—good, solid thoughts. And now he's ready to put those ideas into action with a gun.

The change from typewriter to rifle came about this week at Fort McPherson, where Mays was inducted into the armed service as a private after volunteering. He has been working as news editor of the prize-winning Cobb County Times for nearly a year.

Mays, a native of Louisville, Ga., is a graduate of the University of Georgia where he majored in journalism for an A. B. degree. He stayed an extra year at Athens and received a master's degree in education. While on the campus he was active on the staffs of student publications.

What might be the proper attitude for a private to take regarding the war? Mays states simply that each doughboy "should strive to do best what he is assigned to do, and be on the alert to do it even better."

During the summer of 1939 the youthful Georgia journalist created widespread attention by making a solo bicycle trip throughout the south, writing daily newspaper articles concerning his experiences. Last summer he was one of a small group of youthful Georgians who conducted recreational institutes in four Virginia counties at the request of civic groups in that state.

"I've traveled quite a lot in search of material for articles," says Mays, "and I'd like to make my next trip straight to Berlin, where I could write an interesting dispatch from the Wilhelmstrasse."

Murray Urges Halt In Jurisdictional Strikes During War

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—(AP)—CIO Chief Philip Murray urged the American Federation of Labor to co-operate with the Congress of Industrial Organizations in a program designed to halt jurisdictional strikes for the duration of the war.

U. S. Control Of All Wage Raises Asked

War Labor Board Seeks To Apply Formula

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—(AP)—The War Labor Board, applying its wage stabilization formula, refused a general increase today to 2,750 General Cable Company employees in New Jersey and advocated government control over all general wage increases.

The board's present authority extends only to disputed wage demands brought before it.

"It should be recognized by all concerned," said Dean Wayne L. Morse, who wrote the opinion, "that the wage formula adopted by the board will not and cannot result in wage stabilization if it is limited in its application to wage disputes which come before the War Labor Board for final determination."

"If wage stabilization is to be accomplished, the terminal limits set forth in the formula must be applied universally and uniformly to so-called voluntary wage increases."

"In order to accomplish such an end, it would appear necessary to require government review and approval of all general wage increases. The inflationary effects of a race between prices and wages cannot be stopped in the absence of a governmental check upon wage increases as well as those which arise from wage demands in disputed cases."

Morse also took occasion to say "There has been a considerable amount of misunderstanding about the formula and said the board was satisfied its application would add less than one billion dollars or well under one and one half per cent to the present national wage bill of more than 70 billion."

The AFL International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers had asked an increase of 10 cents an hour for the workers in the Bayonne and Perthamby plants of General Cable. The board voted a three-cent-an-hour increase for night shift workers, instead of five cents asked by the union. It refused the union's request to increase the annual vacation allowance of one week. Although the decision adversely affected an AFL union, the two AFL members of the board voted with the majority, while the two CIO members dissented. The vote was seven to two.

Mrs. Worley, 69, Discovered Dead

Mrs. Lena Worley, 69, was found dead in her apartment at 71 Memorial drive, S. E., yesterday morning, police reported.

The body was discovered by her son, W. H. Worley, who resides at the same address, at about 10 o'clock. Detectives J. M. Austin and C. L. Taylor said a coroner's inquest held yesterday afternoon returned a verdict of "death from natural causes."

Mrs. Worley is survived by a daughter, Mrs. T. F. Williamson, of LaGrange; three sons, C. E. Worley, of Miami, Fla.; W. H. Worley, of Atlanta; and E. E. Worley, of Ball Ground, and a brother, J. J. Futrelle, of Atlanta.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

Murray stated he was "deeply concerned" by work stoppages caused by strong differences and recalled that, in a letter to AFL President William Green last Sunday, he had proposed the creation of a joint CIO-AFL committee, with an impartial arbitrator, to handle all jurisdictional disputes between the two groups.

"I hope the federation will empower its president to mediate, conciliate and arbitrate," he said. "If the executive council (AFL) agrees to delegate that power to its president, I am prepared to make an appeal to the federation that there will not be another strike caused by jurisdictional disputes in the United States during the war. I depend on the AFL. I am ready to do my part."

Views Defined. Murray defined his views in a speech before the annual convention of the United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers Union (CIO).

Green, then attending a meeting of the AFL executive council, made no comment.

Murray also touched briefly on the agreement of the AFL and CIO to consider a reunion of their forces at a peace parley. He said "many knotty problems will arise in the coming unity conference, and I appeal to the patience of American workers while the two committees strive to adjust differences."

Murray, one of the members of the three-man CIO committee appointed to discuss the feasibility of a CIO-AFL merger with a similar AFL committee, reported his purpose would be to "represent CIO thinking," but added that "I will not go into discussions with an arbitrary attitude."

AFL Criticized. The time and place for the conference have not yet been determined.

Murray criticized a reported agreement between the AFL and the British Trade Union Congress, under which the AFL would select CIO and railroad brotherhood delegates to a conference on co-operation between American and British labor. He said he would cable Sir Walter Citrine, secretary of the BTUC, a demand that the CIO and the brotherhoods be recognized on a basis of equality with the AFL.

Green sent Murray formal notice that the AFL was ready to participate in the unity parley and that the AFL committee would get in touch with Murray to arrange the date and select the site.

'Little Steel' Firm Signs CIO Contract

The agreement covers 44,000 employees of the Indiana Harbor plant and the mills at Chicago Heights, Ill.

Revoke Threatens Overtime Policy

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—(AP)—The United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers' Union today served notice it would revoke its policy of shunning overtime pay for war labor on Saturdays and Sundays within the regular work week unless rival groups made similar sacrifices.

The executive board of the big CIO union formulated the policy

America Seeks Raw Materials From de Gaulle

Discussions Being Held With Committee of Fighting French.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—(AP)—Secretary of State Hull disclosed today that discussions are being held with representatives of the fighting French National Committee in London to formulate a procedure for obtaining raw materials from French Equatorial Africa and other territories controlled by the fighting French (formerly called the Free French).

Hull's attention was called at his press conference to reports from London that Britain and the United States soon would conclude a tripartite economic agreement with the National Committee headed by Charles de Gaulle.

He confirmed that discussions were under way, but added that it was too early to make any definite statement.

The discussions, he said, revolved entirely around the lend-lease policy under which aid already has been going to the Fighting French, but with emphasis on the possibilities of obtaining strategic materials from French Equatorial Africa.

Rubber is understood to be one of the most important raw materials involved.

50 Mayors Ask Appointment Of Fuel Oil Czar

Resolution Adopted Urging Choice of No. 1 Man 'With Authority.'

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—(AP)—Mayors of 50 east coast cities today asked for appointment of a single fuel oil czar to relieve a shortage in 17 Atlantic coast states which some of them said, could not be done through voluntary sharing by non-ratified states.

A meeting presided over by Mayor LaGuardia, of New York, ordered sent to federal government officials copies of resolutions asking choice of a number one man "with authority" to solve fuel oil production and distribution problems of the east and appealing to non-ratified Americans to share their oil voluntarily.

Further Cuts Heard. Their action came out of a session which heard a prediction of further cuts in the basic gasoline rationing and which heard Boston's Mayor Maurice J. Tobin warn that high death rate of the influenza epidemic year of 1918 "could be repeated..." if New England homes are not sufficiently heated this winter.

The assertion of Walter P. Hedden, of the New York Port Authority and consultant to the Office of Defense Transportation that "... a cut of 20 per cent or more in our basic gasoline rationing" may be necessary unless 200,000 barrels of fuel oil a day be made available in the midwest brought blunt comment on proposed voluntary sharing.

Mayor William A. Bennett, of Worcester, Mass., keynoted that comment with the statement that he would be able to sell the midwest on the voluntary sacrifice of fuel oil. "I'm convinced that it's got to be done by federal order."

Complaints Volued. Complaints which led to drafting of the oil czar resolution were voiced repeatedly at the meeting and were summed up by Wesley E. Downing, fuel company president and adviser to the New England transportation director, as a need for "somebody with definite authority."

Downing declared, "While transportation and supply are basic problems, there is also the fact that it's almost impossible to get a definite answer in Washington. You get kind of sick of the general turnaround."

Mayor LaGuardia, who told the mayors representing cities from Miami, Fla., to Portland, Me., that he is convinced of the need for nationwide fuel oil rationing, quoted Petroleum Administration of War spokesman as saying that delivery was under way on the additional 5,000 railroad tank cars ordered Saturday for the east.

Big Tanks Offered To Aid Gas Shortage

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—(AP)—Senator Pepper, Democrat, Florida, said today a group of oil companies have offered unused bulk gasoline storage tanks for installation under wooden barges to help offset the eastern seaboard's gasoline shortage.

E. T. Brooks, of Jacksonville, Fla., and A. H. Philpott, of Tampa, Fla., said that the tanks would hold from 18,000 to 25,000 gallons of gasoline each, and six tanks could be placed upon each wooden barge.

The barges, they said, can be built readily in Florida and in other parts of the country.

Brooks said that an experienced management and group of skilled workers had been assembled to begin construction.

NEW DELHI, India—American soft drinks and cigarettes have begun to reach the American forces in India; and that's important war news. Wars are not won with steel alone; the contentment of the troops is quite as often a decisive factor.

Emory Expects Big Enrollment For Fall Term

Heavier Teaching Load Seen as Faculty Men Enter Service.

Instead of a student shortage and an excess faculty, as expected by Emory University administration officials last winter, prospects for the coming fall term indicate the greatest enrollment in Emory's history—and an increased teaching load because several of the faculty will enter war duty.

More than 40 doctors in the medical school faculty expect to leave with the Base Hospital Unit No. 43 on September 1, while about a dozen other faculty members will be serving the government either in or out of uniform.

Prospects of an all-time peak enrollment is indicated in the number of freshmen expected to enroll in the College of Arts and Science this fall, according to J. G. Stipe, director of admissions. Stipe expects a freshman class in the College of 125 this fall, which, with 117 freshmen who entered the college this summer, promises a freshman class in the college next fall of about 250 students. Present enrollment of 1,392 in all Atlanta branches of the University has set an all-time record summer registration at Emory.

Officer Material.
According to Emory officials, the armed services are looking to colleges for officer material and urge education for civilian leadership. A joint program, the Enlisted Reserve Corps, has been established to obtain future officers with college education. Students in this service are regarded by military officials as co-operating patriotically in the over-all war effort and will not be called into active duty until they have completed college training, unless exigencies of the war situation demand their immediate service, say Emory officials.

The nursing school at Emory will begin its third class of trainees this year when 50 students enroll for nurses' training September 1. A class of 25 students accepted in March and a class of 40 entered in June. The Emory University Medical school, operating on a year-round basis, will accept a new class next spring.

Speedup Program.
Under the speedup program, the student may complete the four-year course in three calendar years and the two-year course in one and one-half years. The present summer term will end August 27 and the fall term will open September 24, it has been announced.

Among professors lost to the faculty are Dr. R. T. Lagemann, Dr. Mose L. Harvey and Harold G. Murphy, all in research activity for the same phase of the war effort. Boyce F. Martin, who resigned as dean of the school of business administration to become defense expeditor for a cement firm; J. L. Campbell, a recruiting specialist for Civil Service in southern states; Dr. D. T. Brice, a major in the Ordnance Corps, and S. M. Shiver Jr., analyst in the Signal Corps. Two faculty members are at induction centers this week and several other faculty members expect to be inducted this fall.

The price of the tract, including 1,220 acres of high land and 350 acres of marsh land, was $35,500.

Sentences meted out ranged from 19 months to eight years imprisonment.

Patrolman Faces Drinking Charge

A. J. Mahs, city patrolman, yesterday was under suspension by order of Police Chief Hornsby charged with "drinking with some soldiers" Monday night on Ivy street.

Mahs was arrested by Lieutenant M. B. Petty on a charge of drunkenness. The suspension of Mahs followed an earlier suspension, during the week, of A. D. Smith, of the police signal bureau, on charges of being drunk and operating a car and having an accident.

Preparation for the trial of Mahs at the next meeting of the police committee, Thursday night, August 13, were being made yesterday.

Cows May Pick Their Choice Grass at Tifton Station

TIFTON, Ga., Aug. 5.—(P)—Dairymen throughout Georgia are watching with interest an experiment with a "cow cafeteria" at the Coastal Plain Experiment Station here.

It is a large field in which nine strains of Bermuda grass have been planted with no separating fences, so that each cow can graze on the strain she prefers.

Records thus far show that the station's dairy herd prefers certain strains to others, and when the experiment is ended, station geneticists will be able to recommend the best blend for use on Georgia farms generally.

The new strains planted in the field have survived a series of tests and are products of the grass breeding program that has been

State Employees Given Orders

Things are getting sticky around the state capitol.

A list of state employees operating automobiles has been compiled and yesterday a Talmadge sticker was sent each one with a subtle suggestion: "You better paste it on, too."

The dearth of Talmadge stickers on cars around the state will be augmented by some 8,000 with enforcement of the new order from the Palace Guard.

Mrs. Reeves Is Welcomed On Return From Canal Zone

... THE SILVER LINING to the dark cloud which has caused countless families to be separated during this war is, in one instance, the return to this city of Mrs. James H. Reeves Jr., who recently arrived here from the Canal Zone. Her husband, Major Reeves, who is on duty in Panama, is the son of General James H. Reeves, director of the Atlanta Red Cross. General Reeves, by the way, has three sons in the service of his country.

Mrs. Reeves was accompanied here by her small sons, James H. III, and Leonard Sims Reeves, and the trio will be with General and Mrs. Reeves at their residence at East Lake for the duration.

Attractive and dulcet-voiced Mrs. Reeves is the former Carol Sims, daughter of General Leonard H. Sims, who is on active duty overseas. With her babies, she was one of the last group of Army and Navy wives evacuated from the Canal Zone.

Three-year-old Jimmy Reeves is named for his grandfather, and is the first grandchild in the Sims and Reeves families. He is a very self-reliant youngster, and possesses the ramrod-straight back and forward chin becoming of a future general. Completely unspoiled, he is friendly and obedient, and his bright smile captivates everyone.

Baby Leonard, who is just six months old, is named for his Grandfather Sims, and has a unique status in the world by reason of the fact that he was born in the Republic of Panama. This means that when he is 21 years old, he will be given the privilege of choosing whether he wishes to be a citizen of the United States or of the Republic of Panama! With two distinguished generals in his family, it is more than likely that he will adopt "Old Glory" as his flag.

His proud parents registered him immediately after birth with the United States consul in Panama as a citizen of the United States. To do this, they had to bring in their own birth certificates, their marriage license, the baby's birth certificate, and Major Reeves' commission papers in the United States Army!

... A GALA reunion of post-debutantes is taking place this week at Keefer Newton's home in Forsyth. Virginia Dulaney and Mary Ellen Orme left Tuesday for Forsyth and will remain through Sunday.

The charming belles, you recall, were among the most popular and widely feted of last season's debutantes, but since Keefer's home is in Forsyth, they do not see each other as often as they would like.

Dancing, horseback riding, swimming and bridge will feature the entertainment during their visit, and doubtless the girls will discuss the possibility of a 1942-43 Debutante Club.

... A FAMILY houseparty has been in full swing down at Sea Island, where Mrs. Louise Ayres Robert has been spending the past two weeks at the Robert cottage. With her was her mother, affectionately known to all as "Granny" Pearson, as well as her daughter, Louise Robert (Mrs. Grant) LeRoux, and the latter's baby son, Grant Jr. Captain LeRoux, now stationed in Miami, could not be with the family, but Lieutenant L. W. Robert III, now in the Army, flew down from Langley Field, Va., to join his wife, Georgia, and their two children, Helen and L. W. IV, as the guests of Mrs. Robert.

When Army duty took Lieutenant Robert back to his base in Virginia, and Louise returned to Miami, Mrs. Robert took a cottage at Neptune Beach, Fla., for August. She has with her, her mother, Georgia, and the latter's two children. Although the blackout is in effect each evening, the Atlanta group finds plenty of fun and relaxation on this small beach nestled on the Atlantic coast between Sea Island and Jacksonville.

... THE AUDIENCE attending the "back-to-college" fashion show, staged yesterday in Davison's, applauded thunderously when one of the models, popular Bunny Strubling, burst into song. The audible compliment was in appreciation of both Bunny's rendition and of the song, "The Little Country Store," which was written by two Atlantans, Remus Harris, who now resides in New York, and Irving Melchior.

Since the show (it will be repeated again this afternoon) is based on the country store theme being featured by Vogue this year, the song is singularly appropriate. As it happens, however, the idea of the song and of the fashion display are coincidental, for the song was written several years ago. Remus and Irving, as you know, are the co-authors of several hit tunes, one of their most popular ones being the record-breaking "Cry Baby, Cry."

Mrs. Brown Hostess For Miss Steedman

Mrs. Alex B. Brown entertained at morning coffee yesterday at the Biltmore hotel in compliment to Miss Marguerite Steedman, whose first novel, "But You'll Be Back," was released on Tuesday by Houghton-Mifflin Company. The affair was one of a series planned in compliment to the author in connection with the publication of her book.

Mrs. Brown's guests gathered on the Biltmore terrace overlooking the garden. They were seated at a beautifully appointed table, centered with a mound of pale green grapes arranged with their foliage on a silver platter. The hostess presented to her honor guest as a souvenir a miniature glass oil lamp, with the notation that since she had burned the midnight oil in writing her first book, the lamp signified a new supply with which to begin on the second. The guests then wrote suggested titles for Miss Steedman's second novel.

Covers were placed for the honor guest, her mother, Mrs. W. K. Steedman, Mesdames Legare Davis, Stuart Clare, William L. Gatling, John Marsh, L. A. McKinley, Paul Seydel, Bonita Crowe, A. A. Greene, Miss Helen Knox Spain, Miss Erva Blackstock and the hostess, Mrs. Brown.

The date of the party marked the first anniversary of the publication of Mrs. Brown's first book, "Red Hills."

Miss Rebecca Crawford Weds Lieutenant Robert Clarkson

LINCOLN, Ga., Aug. 5.—

The marriage of Miss Rebecca Marshall Crawford, daughter of Mrs. William Beall Crawford and the late Dr. Crawford, of Lincoln, and Lieutenant Robert Johnson Clarkson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Garden Clarkson Sr., of Camden, S. C., was recently solemnized at an afternoon ceremony performed in the Presbyterian church at Lincoln. The bride is a cousin of Mrs. Harold Martin, of Atlanta, the former Miss Boyce Bokey.

The vows were spoken before the cousin of the groom, Rev. Allen B. Clarkson, of Edgefield, S. C., rector of Edgefield Episcopal church.

The ushers were Blanding D. Clarkson, of Hartsville, S. C., and William Clarkson, of Camden, S. C., brothers of the groom.

The bride's striking brunet loveliness was accentuated by her wedding gown of ivory satin fashioned along classic lines. The skirt ended in a sweeping train. Her exquisite veil was of imported Brussels lace and was loaned by her cousin, Mrs. Harold Martin, of Atlanta. It was caught to her hair by a coronet of orange blossoms. She wore a string of pearls, a gift of the groom. Her bridal bouquet was of rubrum lilies showered with tuberoses.

Following the ceremony, the bride's mother entertained at a reception. Receiving were the mother of the bride, the parents of the groom, the bridal pair, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Henry Taliaferro, of Columbus, sister and brother of the bride, and William Crawford, brother of the bride.

Assisting in entertaining were Mrs. J. M. Spratt, Mrs. Hugh Green, Miss Ruth Plumb, Mrs. B. O. Wright, Mrs. R. L. Huff, Misses Stella Hogan, Julia Hogan, Camille Dozier, Bobbie Freeman, Roslyn Spratt, Mrs. B. B. Florence Jr., Miss Dorothy Breaux, Mrs. C. M. May, Mrs. W. C. Martin and Miss Virginia Wilkes. Miss Mattie Joe May kept the bride's book.

During the afternoon the bride and groom left on their wedding trip, after which they will reside in Aberdeen, Md., where the groom is stationed on Army duty. The bride traveled in a model of elm green and yellow featuring gold buttons. Her accessories were of brown. She wore a shoulder spray of asters.

Miss Young Hostess.

Miss Mae Jo Young entertained a group of her schoolmates recently with a luncheon and movie party. Guests present were Misses Nancy Gower, Frances Smith, Mary Ann Goodwin, Betty Wilson, Elma Slider and Ann Steinhouse.

The Latest Hits in Campus Wear Take the Spotlight Again

College fashions have the spotlight in every clothing shop this week. One imaginative presentation of clothes for the college lass has girls who attend different colleges "keeping store" in an amusing, old-fashioned country store. Besides serving sweet cider from kegs these girls act as consultants on campus fads and fancies.

Standing by the cash register is Miss Anne Equen, student at Agnes Scott, who wears a muffin brown jersey dress trimmed with soft blue bands that run horizontally. Price, $19.98. In the same picture is Miss Helen Taulman, student at Sarah Lawrence, who is modeling a rabbit's hair jersey, the bodice of which is natural beige, the skirt, with patch pockets, a muted green. The price, $25.

ridge, enrolled at William and Mary, wearing a frock of black and red velvet. Around the skirt, waist and round neckline runs a green woolen corded band. This dress is priced at $22.98. Miss Lillian Winship, of Hollins, wears a wide-wale corduroy two-piece dress, in a shade of green called pine mist. It is priced at $10.98. War Workers Bring New Spending Era To Hollywood

By Harold Heffernan.

Look out on Hollywood boulevard any early morning now, from midnight to dawn, and you'd imagine that fabulous, wild-spending era of movietown in the mid-twenties had returned. Thousands of defense workers join soldiers and sailors on leave to paint the main steam a bright and noisy red. A score of theaters in the mile stretch from La Brea to Vine are running all night, catering to toweling shift workers, automobiles (often six abreast) clog traffic and the din of revelers echoes far back into the hills. Hollywood is no longer a 10 o'clock town. It has gone completely wild and wide open and, oddly, the movie folks have had nothing to do with the transformation.

Jeanette MacDonald and M.-G.-M. are parting company after seven years. Like many another whose option is now being dropped, Jeanette was getting too much money. . . . Mary Martin, a star at Paramount, walked up and down the farmer's market the other noon drawing no more than a passing glance from the crowds. On the other hand, Patricia Morison, merely a free lance player, was besieged at every turn by autograph collectors. The reason? Pat looks like her screen image out in public; Mary doesn't. . . . If you ever run across the name of Shad Ablegate, it was a pseudonym taken by Director Sam Wood during a lean period many years back. He was an actor for six months under that tag. He doesn't often care to be reminded of the period.

Not in many years has Hollywood plucked from its own doorstep a girl so photogenic as Gail Russell, 17-year-old Santa Monica high school student, who owes her contract at Paramount to the enthusiasm of two hitch-hikers. William Miekjohn, casting director at that studio, driving back from the beach a few weeks ago, gave a lift to a couple of students. Learning his identity, the boys began raving about a girl named Russell in their school who, they insisted, was "much more beautiful than Hedy Lamarr." Miekjohn called the school principal next day to ask about the girl named Russell. The principal said there were five girls bearing the name of Russell enrolled there, all of them good to feast an eye upon. Whereupon, the casting director made a personal visit to the school, and all five Russells paraded before him—and easily picked out Gail as the hitch-hikers' dream girl. The Loys should be signed up, too, as talent scouts. They proved excellent pickers, for every place Gail came around the lot she elicits a chorus of admiring "ohs" and "ahs" and inquiries. She is making her debut in the latest Henry Aldrich picture.

Ernest Lubitsch is calling Emil Ludwig, the biographer, out here to do a treatment on a life story of Christopher Columbus. . . . Laugh of the week is M.-G.-M.'s hiring a technical advisor on knife throwing for one of their pictures. It seems like carrying coals to Newcastle. . . . A quiet but bitter little contest has started among a number of Hollywood girls seeking the role of Durnadette in "The Song of Durnadette." Linda Darnell very much wants to play it. So does Anne Baxter. Lillian Gish, no longer a youngster, has been discussed, and so has Deanna Durbin. There is no singing in the picture.

A serious walkout occurred at one of the major studios a few days ago when an executive, dissatisfied with a girl dancer's work, slapped her twice. A chorus boy slugged the executive and walked off the set. The balance of the dancers refused to work under the man. At the moment the Screen Actors' Guild is checking the case. The studio's front office is checking the executive. Bing Crosby has almost 50 relatives and family retainers on his pay roll—a real record in "Hollywood Cousins."

Precautions to Prevent Tuberculosis

By Dr. William Brady.

According to recent investigations the frequency of occurrence of tuberculosis of the lung among medical students has shown an encouraging decline in the past five years. In 1938 a committee investigating medical student health in the United States estimated a tuberculosis rate of 7 per cent in all medical schools, although in some medical schools where well established student health programs are in effect the rate is as low as 0.2 to 0.4 per cent.

Among the precautions taken to prevent tuberculosis among students of medicine (most of these would apply of course to college students in general) are (1) supervision of the student's living and eating conditions; (2) provision for regular exercise and wholesome recreation; (3) critical investigation of the sanitary atmosphere of restaurant or lunchroom or boarding house and periodic medical examination of waiters or food handlers or those who prepare the food in such places, to make certain no potential source of infection is overlooked; (4) tuberculin testing of all students as routine, when they enter college, and X-ray of chest in every instance if the tuberculin test is positive.

It is a familiar observation that college students, who may have more knowledge than others of their age but too often lack wisdom, take long chances with their health at a period of growth and development when lifelong health habit is being acquired. That is, the habit of keeping well, of giving reasonable and sensible consideration to hygiene without becoming at all cranky or morbid about it. In that, as college life goes, students of medicine are not exceptional—they are as reckless or as foolish as college students in general.

Some additional precautions are necessary to protect medical students, as well as interns, hospital staff physicians, nurses, attendants, laboratory technicians and others of the hospital, clinic, dispensary or sanatorium personnel. For instance, physicians, students, interns and nurses should invariably wear suitable masks when examining, treating or attending patients who have tuberculosis. Unfortunately, however, this precaution is more honored in the breach than the observance. Again, something akin to surgical asepsis should be required of all laboratory workers, students, physicians and attendants, dealing with tuberculous pathological material. This rule, too, is grossly violated in too many pretentious institutions.

Tuberculosis may be spread not only in the droplet spray from the coughing patient but also in the droplet spray of the talking patient. It is ignorance of this fact that accounts for the long chances some physicians, interns and poorly trained nurses take when attending patients—without masks.

MY DAY: Importance Of Home Nursing

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

NEW YORK CITY, Tuesday.—Yesterday was such a clear and beautiful day that we went to the top of the hill back of my cottage for a picnic on the porch of the President's little cottage. He has had vistas cut, so that as you sit on his porch, if the weather is clear, you can see the Catskill mountains to the north and straight down across the Hudson river.

By walking a very short distance from the highest point of all, one can get a view of the foothills of the Berkshires and the Shawangunk range to the south.

We all enjoyed ourselves, except the poor cat. She had to be shut up because she went after a little dog we had with us who was completely intimidated by her. Fortunately, as we left, I remembered she must be given her freedom and the closet door was opened.

In the late afternoon I had to meet a train, and then go to the library for the opening of an exhibition of "Paintings of Dutchess County," by members of the Dutchess County Art Association. It was a very well attended party.

The association had chosen 11 winning pictures which are to be photographed for a calendar. The twelfth is to be chosen by the public, so everybody was asked to vote and the voting will continue until the close of the exhibition at the end of this month.

This morning Miss Thompson and I are going to New York City. After speaking at Teachers' College, Columbia University, tonight, I shall take the night train to Washington.

I have a letter from Mrs. Nathan Straus, of the American Women's Voluntary Services, asking me if I would not remind women every where in the country that they should take a home nursing course.

There are two reasons for this. Wherever possible, people with minor ailments should be cared for at home, because hospital facilities at present are being taxed to the utmost. Their resources are being so largely drawn upon that hospital care must of necessity be limited.

Secondly, people who must go to hospitals will be returned as convalescents sooner than usual and more knowledge of home nursing is necessary. The volunteer nurses' aides are being trained by the hospitals, but of course, only take this training if willing to give the required number of hours of service in the hospital afterwards.

In all probability, you should be willing to serve for the duration of the war. Naturally, this is not possible for women who have home responsibilities, especially young children or older people to be cared for in the home.

SCHOOLS TO OPEN.
ELLAVILLE, Ga., Aug. 15.—Schley county schools are to open Monday, September 14, instead of the usual date, Labor Day. Reason for the delay in opening, according to Superintendent Raymond Duncan, is to give farmers time to harvest their crops, thereby eliminating the necessity of children being kept out of school.

Centers Planned For Allied Seamen

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5. (AP)—Organization of the United Seamen's Service, to provide clubhouses for American merchant seamen in principal United States ports and certain foreign ports, was announced today by Admiral Emory S. Land, war shipping administrator.

The service will be headed by Henry J. Kaiser, west coast shipbuilder, and will be a non-profit organization which will operate under a $5,000,000 fund contributed by shipbuilding companies, ship operators, maritime labor unions and welfare sources, Land said.

Recreational facilities of this sort have not heretofore been generally available because merchant seamen are not always eligible for the facilities provided for members of the uniformed armed forces, although they are in greater need than any other group, he explained.

ITALIAN SHIPS BLASTED

LONDON, Aug. 5. (AP)—A British submarine in the Mediterranean has sunk one Italian supply ship and damaged another so severely she had to be beached, the admiralty announced today.

Comedy Takes Spotlight on Screen Menu

Music and Drama Also Included in Week's Offerings.

Comedy is the keynote of this week's film fare, with music and drama in good proportion offered in other movies, as Atlanta theaters make their week-end changes in billings.

"Ball of Fire," the comedy which delighted moviegoers many months ago, returns to the Rialto today for a return engagement. Romance and music is the theme of the Fox's bill, "Footlight Serenade," with dancing honors going to Betty Grable.

"Mrs. Miniver," the great war story, is held over at the Rhodes theater for a fifth week beginning today. "Lady in a Jam," another comedy, opens on the Roxy screen tomorrow.

Loew's Grand

A new romantic team, William Powell and Hedy Lamarr, make their first appearance on the screen together in "Crossroads," M-G-M's story of international crime, which opens at Loew's Grand theater today.

Set in Paris before the war, the cinema story tells of how the life of a diplomat and that of his beautiful wife is jeopardized when they are linked in a giant extortion plot.

Basil Rathbone and Claire Trevor, in the roles of the real swindlers, threatened Powell's entire career when they introduce evidence of his criminal past.

Rialto

"Ball of Fire," the delightful comedy starring Gary Cooper and Barbara Stanwyck, which played an extended run at the Rialto theater some months ago, will return for a second engagement beginning today. Manager Bill Murray announces it is for one week only.

The amusing story tells of how a group of professors, including Professor Potts (Gary Cooper) set out to write a dictionary. They visit the low-down on slang, they visit a night club where Barbara Stanwyck (Sugarbuss) is the main attraction.

Barbara not only gives them the low-down on slang but she falls in love with said Professor Potts.

Fox

Romance, music and laughs aplenty is the dish to be served up at the Fox theater beginning tomorrow when "Footlight Serenade," starring Betty Grable, Vic-

Girl Gun Crews Shoot Down 3 Nazi Planes Over Britain

LONDON, Aug. 5. (AP)—A former dressmaker and a maid helped shoot down three of the six German bombers destroyed over Britain in the past 48 hours.

They are members of the Auxiliary Territorial Service who help man anti-aircraft defenses along the east coast. Others who were in action included a former telephone operator, a nurse and a seamstress. The girls, all between the ages of 18 and 27, were in action for several hours alongside male members of the anti-aircraft batteries.

for Mature and John Payne opens a week's engagement at that theater.

The story concerns itself with the moulding of a large musical comedy. Much of the action takes place backstage.

Beautiful Betty does the dancing and Payne and Mature handle the romantic leads. Phil Shivers and James Gleason are seen in comedy roles.

Many new tunes, including "I'm Still Crazy for You," "Are You Kidding Me" and "I'll Be Marching to a Love Song," are introduced in the extravagant musical.

Roxy

Irene Dunne returns to the screen in a comedy role in her latest screen venture, "Lady in a Jam," which opens tomorrow at the Roxy theater. She is co-starred with Ralph Bellamy and Patric Knowles.

Gregory La Cava, noted comedy director, put the actors through their paces in this picture which tells of how a New York heiress, after losing her fortune, journeys west in search of new riches.

Bellamy is seen in the role of a lazy cow puncher who strums a guitar and sings—in the best of his ability and Knowles is the object of Miss Dunne's affections.

U. S. Flying General Finds Deliveries to Russia Difficult

MOSCOW, Aug. 5.—(AP)—Major General Follet Bradley, on a special flying mission from the United States to speed American aid to Russia, said tonight that deliveries of war material to the Soviet Union were becoming increasingly difficult due to German bombings of northern shipping lanes and the land offensive in the Caucasus.

... The Market Basket

Atlanta housewives who keep their families sleek and contented on that typically American dish, apple pie, should not neglect the bargain now obtainable in northwestern greenings apples, the finest quality for cooking that have been on the local market for a long time.

Measuring two and a half or more inches around, they are selling for the cheap price of two pounds for 13 cents. The spud has stepped into the footlights again in the form of large California white potatoes, ideal for baking, at the reasonable rate of four pounds for 25 cents. This year's crop of Georgia sweet potatoes is also beginning to come in.

Excellent values in the meat market are to be found in lamb patties, at 29 cents a pound, medium chicken legs, made of ground veal, at 25 cents a pound, and veal patties at 25 cents a pound.

Large stalks of Michigan celery, just now coming into the market this season, cost only 15 cents for two stalks. White onions, Colorado fresh English peas, at the now reasonable rate of 10 cents a pound, and Georgia grapes and pears are other outstanding values. Turnip salad, though reasonable, will be cheaper and more plentiful when the fall crop comes in.

Gas Ration Violators Are Given Warning

System Is Fool-Proof, OPA Administrator Says.

Motorists who think they have found the way to beat the new gasoline rationing system had better enjoy their fun now, because it won't last long, E. Allison Thornwell, state OPA administrator, said yesterday.

Numerous anonymous telephone calls have come to his office the past few days, the administrator said, telling of people who have been making a grand tour of the state obtaining a gasoline ration book from a number of local ration boards.

The grapevine says they are getting the books, but the hitch in their plan is this: Ration books are issued only upon the presentation of the owner's vehicle registration certificate. Information on the certificate is recorded by the board issuing the ration book. It is forwarded to the home ration board where the book is issued. The home board then makes a file for each motorist, and records of the issuance of more than one book to a motorist will be immediately detected, it was pointed out.

The new coupon rationing system, "fool-proof," is really just that, Thornwell said. "There is no way to beat this system," he declared. Penalty for violation of the gasoline rationing rules and regulations may be imprisonment for 10 years or a fine of $10,000.

Record Crowd Is Seen For Salem Meeting

114th Annual Camp Meeting Opens Today Near Covington.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. COVINGTON, Ga., Aug. 5.—A record-breaking crowd is expected to be on hand Thursday morning when the 114th annual camp meeting at Salem Campground opens.

Major R. J. Guinn, of Atlanta, said this week that final preparations had been completed and that indications point to the largest attendance in many years in spite of rubber shortages and gas rationing.

The first three days of the annual session will be devoted largely to young people's activities, he said, with Parks R. Warnock, of Atlanta, directing the program. Sunday morning Bishop Arthur J. Moore will deliver the opening sermon at 11:30 a. m. Sunday afternoon Dr. Bascom Anthony, of Savannah, will preach with Dr. Charles King, of Houston, Texas, delivering the night sermon.

The same general program will be followed throughout the remainder of the meeting with three services in the arbor on the new grounds, with Dr. Louie D. Campbell, of Atlanta, speaking at the morning service, Dr. Anthony at the afternoon service and Dr. King at night service.

Music for the meeting will be provided by Salvation Army musicians from Atlanta, the Emory-Oxford Glee Club and a quartet from Shorter College. Major Ray Gearing, of the Atlanta Salvation Army, will serve as platform director. The meeting will close August 16.

What Stocks Did.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—(AP)—The stock market suffered repeated sinking spells today, but also managed occasional comebacks, with the net result losses of fractions to a point or so, at a level a little above the poorest for the day in most cases.

Declines outnumbered advances by about 2-1 to 1, with a fair-sized group unchanged, while the turnover, 289,919 shares, was a little below Tuesday's gentle action of 319,180 shares.

The dropping spirits of traders, attributed at least in part to continued bad news from the Russian front, spread to the commodity markets, with Chicago wheat off 3-8 to 1-1/8 cents a bushel and corn 7-8 to 1-1/8 lower.

But a bright feature of the day appeared in the curb exchange, where four preferred issues of Empire Gas & Fuel, a Cities Service subsidiary, added 6-1/2 to 8-3/4 points—more for a time—after approval by the SEC of a recapitalization plan which gave the stocks an apparent break. Otherwise the curb was ragged. Aluminum Co. of America, Aluminum Ind., American Cyanamid "B" and Pittsburgh Plate Glass were off major fractions to a point or more.

In the bond market prices were mixed, but not greatly changed.

All in the Game

By JACK TROY

Splendid Idea Physical fitness is the watchword of the day. Eat the right kind of food. Get plenty of exercise and sleep. And keep singing, barber shop quartets!

It is a great thing for the health and well-being of the nation.

One sees where Duke University has developed a 400-yard commando course for students.

Many students have no interest in athletics. And athletic participation is not compulsory. A student who has got as far along as college without ever playing games like football and baseball would not be a desirable candidate, anyway. And he would be awkward in intramural play.

But the average student can build himself up physically. And the commando course idea at Duke is one that will spread to most universities and colleges. It reaches all students.

Young fellows ought to be in shape. A physical fitness program will make them interested in the athletic programs that are going on around them. Youth walks again, and there will be no way to escape physical fitness.

But I'm wondering about family men who've acquired a paunch—don't look now—and shudder at exercise any more demanding than, say, golf. Better turn in those old balls, fellows, to insure re-processed ones for later use.

Suppose there were no more balls and your golf play was over for the duration?

How, then, would you get out of mowing the lawn?

The Answer There is less than no chance at all for the Dodgers and Yankees to be headed off in their respective pennant races.

There has been a well-defined handwriting on the major league wall for some time.

It has been obvious for a month, or more, that the same teams would meet in the World Series again, and that the result may follow a similar pattern.

(The wrangling Flatbush aggregation may intimidate National League rivals, but the Yankees are from another cut of cloth. They were fashioned from a bolt of lightning.)

Well-meaning critics such as Ty Cobb said it would never do if any team in either league got a long lead. Interest in other towns would die, they said, and there would be an early end to baseball.

(Washington and the Yankees played before 19,000 Tuesday night in Washington, with the Senators outlasting the champions.)

Attendance generally is good in the majors.

And yet in 14 towns there is no chance for a pennant bid. The Bums and the Yanks are virtually home free.

Brooklyn stays almost 100 percentage points ahead of the rival Cardinals, while the Yanks hold a 12-game lead most of the time.

Fans are turning out to see baseball for baseball's sake. The appeal of the game is the same that has kept it flourishing for 101 years.

And it doesn't necessarily take a close pennant race to keep the turnstiles clicking. The war-torn summer of 1942 offers tangible proof.

Fewer Problems The larger major league cities are fortunate in not having the transportation problems that confront the minor leagues.

Fans in the east are used to traveling to games by train, subway and bus. They hardly think of driving a car. Too economical to go the other way, and no parking worries.

Rationing won't have much effect on major league baseball. Nor will a shortage of rubber.

It is readily understandable, therefore, how the National and American League presidents are able to announce that plans for the 1943 season are being made in the usual manner.

The usual two Pullman cars are not available for train travel, but there has been no interruption of schedules.

Trains have done a magnificent job in behalf of sports, under the terrific pressure of wartime travel.

Football teams are going to receive the same sort of service they have been accorded in the past, in so far as officials can give it.

In return, sports help the war effort tremendously through benefit games and in affording relaxation and enjoyment for workers and soldiers.

Foots, Hennie Luttrell Faces To Fight For Battle Tonight Title Tonight With Big Rival

Tonight's battle at Hubert's and Williams gymnasium for the colored middleweight championship of the south between Emory (Jabbin Foots) Jackson, of Atlanta, and Battling Hennie, of Columbia, S. C., at 8:45 o'clock, brings together two of the best young figures in the south today.

An argument of a month will be decided in this battle. Hennie, recognized by fans on the eastern seaboard as the outstanding champion of his section, and Jackson, who a few weeks ago wrecked "Straight Eight" Pryor to prove conclusively that he ranked first in these parts, are the best two boys in the middleweight division since the golden days of the late Tiger Flowers. The winner tonight will be undisputed holder of the title.

A special section will be set aside for white fans and a large crowd is expected for this championship battle. Forty rounds of fighting are on the card, which offers top performers in every division.

Crackers, Chicks Play 2 Tonight

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 5.—The game scheduled here tonight between the Memphis Chicks and Atlanta Crackers was postponed due to unfavorable weather conditions.

The two clubs will make up the game tomorrow night, when they will play a double-header instead of the previously scheduled single contest. The first game will get under way at 7:15 o'clock (Atlanta time).

Dr. Coker Named Head Of Cherokee County Club

CANTON, Ga., Aug. 5.—Dr. Grady N. Coker, of Canton, is the new president of the Cherokee County Conservation Club, a member of the Georgia Wildlife Federation.

Dr. Coker is one of the outstanding sportsmen in this section and as a member of the senate in the 1941 general assembly supported legislation designed to improve the state's game laws. He was elected successor to Lee Evans at a meeting here Tuesday.

Judge Olin Fincher was named vice president and N. E. Fackler was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Dr. Coker announced that the Cherokee club would actively back the Federation in its campaign for a commission-director wildlife department. He said that a big drive for members would be launched over the county during the third week of this month.

WRESTLING AT THIRD—In this mix-up at third base Red Rolfe, Yankee third baseman, practically sits on George Case, of the Senators, but Case is safe sliding into the bag. The play came in the fourth inning of Tuesday night's game at Washington, which the Senators won, 4-3.

DeKalb Forms Wildlife Club At Fry Tonight

Catfish and hushpuppies with all the trimmings is the order tonight at Guy Rutland's lake where sportsmen and conservationists will complete the organization of the DeKalb County Conservation Club as a unit of the Georgia Wildlife Federation.

A crowd of 150 is expected to attend the meeting, which will set off a drive to enlist new supporters of the federation's statewide movement for an effective wildlife administration. Following a preliminary meeting last week at the DeKalb courthouse the club has obtained 71 members, all of whom are members of the federation.

Officers will be elected at tonight's session and quail tag emblems of the rapidly growing statewide organization will be distributed. Jeff D. McCord, Clarence Visscher, H. C. Norris and Guy Rutland Sr. comprise the committee in charge.

Members of the Atlanta Fly and Bait Casting Club and the Atlanta Field Trial Club have been invited.

DeKalb leaders pointed out that the state game farm is located in their county and that sportsmen therefore have additional reason to be interested in the affairs of the state's wildlife program.

The fish fry will be a 50-cent Dutch serving.

Lawson Soldiers Gain Amateur Baseball Finals

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.
Lawson General Hospital's slugging soldiers rode into the finals of the fourth annual Atlanta Amateur Baseball tournament on the good left arm of Dick Douthat last night with a 12 to 2 victory over Fulton Bag, the defending champions.

Lawson will rest today while Fulton and Clarkdale's sensational come-back kids battle it out for the right to meet the Soldiers in a best-two-out-of-three game series for the championship, starting Friday night. Clarkdale spotted Owen Pack's smart Southern Railway team a two-run lead after two innings and then staged their usual rally to win, 4 to 3, on the four-hit hurling of Archie McWilliams, another pitching find of Manager Gabby Asensio.

H. C. McTye, Clarkdale's ace curve-baller, and Buster Rantin, who was kayoed in the first inning last night for his initial tournament loss in three years, are expected to oppose each other on the mound as the two clubs battle for the second spot in the finals and the trip to Youngstown which awaits the winner.

Douthat's pitching and the 16-hit slugging of the Soldiers was too much for Fulton Bag last night as they dropped their first tourney game since 1940. Lefty Dick hurled seven-hit ball and was backed up by some brilliant fielding by his teammates, especially Second Baseman Howard Luce, a brother of Art, ex-Southern League star. Lawson blasted Rantin, Fulton Bag's ace right-hander, out of the box with a four-run outburst in the first inning and continued the assault on J. B. Lazenby, who relieved. The Soldiers have proved

Warden Here Is 'Most Sued' Man in South

Named Defendant in All Habeas Corpus Proceedings at Prison.

Warden Joseph W. Sanford, of the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, believes he is the "most sued" man in this part of the country. He had 33 suits brought against him last month, and in an average year will be named defendant in about 300 separate suits.

This goes on, month after month, year after year, but Warden Sanford isn't bothered about it a bit.

It all comes about because of his position as head of the federal prison.

All cases before a court have to have two sides, and Warden San-

'Bugs' Baer Says:

Well, folks, they caught the first broker operating on the black bourse last week and he pleaded as guilty as a counterfeiter buying green ink.

The fellow had invented a soup spoon with a double bottom.

There was also a matter of thirty thousand pounds of sugar in his bowl. He sure wasn't taking any chances of getting caught short in a candy pull.

This is the land of plenty and that includes time. We hope a generous jury hands it out lavishly.

We can almost forgive the sugar. But that soup spoon rankles.

ford is the man who is named defendant in all habeas corpus proceedings brought by prisoners in the federal prison here.

Harvey H. Tisinger, assistant district attorney who handles the habeas corpus cases for the government, has been called Warden Sanford's lawyer. He is a busy man, for the law says that all habeas corpus cases must go before the court within four days after they are filed.

Since prisoners come here from courts all over the United States, Tisinger is pretty busy gathering evidence from all around the country for his cases. As a result of court proceedings which resulted in the incarceration of prisoners here have to be in writing, the air mail for Tisinger is heavy.

He has tried about 1,500 habeas corpus cases in his legal career, Tisinger says.

Warden Sanford doesn't remember how many times he has been sued. But he knows he wins practically all of his cases.

Don't envy anyone who picked up a splendid used car. Do as HE did. Find one exactly like it in the Want Ads of The Constitution.

Ordnance Units Of Army Need Technicians

Recruiting To Be Held Throughout State for Skilled Workers.

Skilled mechanics and technicians are urgently needed by the United States Army ordnance department to inspect and maintain heavy fighting equipment in order to win battles, Colonel C. Wingate Reed, chief, ordnance department military personnel, declared yesterday.

Seeking a Georgia company of such technicians and mechanics, Colonel Reed and his staff will conduct recruiting throughout the state this month. Applicants may receive information at the Georgia Highway Contractors Association office, 612 Forsyth building, Atlanta, where Reed and his staff will be available August 18. They will be at the state highway division office in Gainesville on August 19, and at Tifton on August 20. Applicants may enroll at the courthouse in Macon on August 19 also.

Mechanics, welders, electricians, machinists, precision instrument specialists, cooks and men with experience along similar lines in civilian life are being sought for the new company.

Course in Fuel Saving Will Be Offered Here

Janitors To Learn Efficient Operation of Furnaces.

Smoke abatement and fuel conservation forces yesterday planned to teach proper firing methods to janitors of apartment houses, schools and factories at school to be held sometime next month. Certificates of proficiency will be awarded those who complete the course satisfactorily.

Professor R. S. King, head of the Georgia Tech Mechanical Engineering department and chairman of the advisory board of the city Smoke Abatement Bureau, said the school will have a two-fold purpose—elimination of smoke and conservation of fuel, saving fuel for use of fighting forces and production centers in the fight against the Axis.

Thomas W. Clift, school business manager, offered school houses for the classes in all sections of Atlanta and pledged cooperation in the program designed to serve the metropolitan area.

Lectures, films, slides and actual demonstrations of the accepted firing methods will be given by experts who are co-operating in the intensive campaign, the first of such proportions launched since establishment of the city's smoke bureau about two years ago.

Cost of the schools will be about $2,000, and J. F. Cannon, supervisor of industrial and distributive education for the state, has pledged 75 per cent of the cost. The remainder of the needed fund will be provided from other sources.

"Proper firing saves up to 50 per cent in fuel, thus reducing cost of operation and at the same time saving fuel which is now badly needed in the war effort," Professor King said. "Since the war there has been a large turnover in janitors. New men especially need the training. Janitors from outside the city limits are invited to take full advantage of the schools, because our problem is metropolitan in scope."

Co-operating in the program are the Coal Producers' Committee for Smoke Abatement, the Atlanta Coal Merchants' Credit Association; Professor D. A. Holland, of Georgia Tech, who will aid in teaching classes, and Knox Walker, superintendent of Fulton county schools.

Old 82d Division Get-Together Set

Men of the old 82d Division will hold a get-together August 7 at the American Legion Post No. 1 clubhouse, 1071 Piedmont avenue. Organized at Camp Gordon in 1917, the division contained such men as Sergeant Alvin York, and Scott Candler, Trammell Scott, and Clark Howell, of Atlanta. The division saw service overseas and, according to Lloyd B. Betts, chairman of the 82d Division Association, was rated as the best national army division in France.

The purpose of this meeting is to gather together the old men of the division to encourage and help the new 82d Division in any way possible.
